Senate candidates to debate

The six Democratic candidates for the U.S. Senatorial nomination are scheduled to participate in a debate Wednesday evening in the Nebraska Union.

Terry Carpenter, John DeCamp, Phyllis Lyons, Wallace Peterson, Donald Searcy, and Wayne Ziebarth have agreed to attend the 8 p.m. affair, the first actual debate of the primary campaign.

Sponsored by the campus chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, society of journalists, the debate will be moderated by Hess Dyas, state chairman of the Democratic Party.

The candidates will be asked to make five-minute opening statements and then to field questions from the moderator and the audience. Any candidate may respond to any remark.

The public is invited to the debate, which will be held in Room 202 of the Union.

Constitution needs 3,020 votes

ASUN will have a new constitution if 3,020 students vote for it in today's election, ASUN Electoral Commissioner Duane Sneddeker said Tuesday.

That is, he explained, if no more than 6,040 people vote, in which case, he said, it would take a majority of the total vote. Last year's total of 4,500 students voting was the second largest voter turn-out in the history of ASUN.
