

Zumberge urges shift in Evan's job

UNL Chancellor James Zumberge has urged the Board of Regents to reassign agricultural economist Bert Evans to the city campus department of economics.

Zumberge based his recommendation on a 27-page report by the academic freedom and tenure committee. The report, released this summer, was compiled from three days of hearings last spring on grievances filed by Evans relating to salary and lack of promotion and tenure.

The committee report recommended that Evans should be considered for a pay hike, promotion and reassignment.

The report indicated the committee's initial concern was to pinpoint Evans' specific assignments and duties.

According to the report, the committee failed to find "a single, well-defined, unambiguous statement which defined Professor Evans' duties and responsibilities as a state specialist."

Testimony during the hearings presented contradicting views of Evans' assignment.

After comparing Evans' salary with those of other agricultural economists, the committee concluded that he was "seriously underpaid."

The committee also noted that Evans' had a different perspective on his job than did his supervisors, which may have caused his lack of promotion.

Flag football kicks off

Anyone who wishes to officiate flag football games should be present at a meeting of officials Sept. 6, at 6:30 p.m. in the Union. The flag football season is scheduled to begin Sept. 12. Officials will be paid $1.65 per game plus bonuses for extra games.

This year flag football teams will be playing more games due to the addition of three more lighted fields on 17th Street.
