

Home ec seniors manage households

Girls managing a household—that's what is involved in the Home Management Laboratory on East Campus.

Home Economics majors in vocational education, interior design and family resources spend five weeks of their senior year managing their own housing units, located directly south of Burr-Fedde dormitory.

The girls plan their own meals, clean house and set up schedules to manage their time.

The emphasis of the program is on group living and rapport, according to Mary Whan, project director.

Whan said the concept of the project is to grade students on how they manage their own home, and to see how they react when living with other students.

The program began in the 1930's as a test for student management skills.

In the early years of the program, students took care of babies. Legal complications put a stop to that part of the project.

Most of the girls live in the two laboratory apartments set up for the class. However, married students and others who choose may live elsewhere and take part in the lab only during the day.

Home management...emphasis on group living and rapport.

Correction . . .

Bart Becker's Monday column inadvertently did not contain the vital information on a "film schedule" included. The films will be shown at 2 p.m. Sundays at the Joslyn Art Museum in Omaha.

The film schedule: Sept. 17, Animal Crackers with the Marx Brothers; Sept. 24, Dinner at 8 with Jean Harlow, Wallace Beery and John Barrymore; Oct. 8, The Champ with Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper; Oct. 15, Ziegfeld Follies with Judy Garland, William Powell, Fred Astaire and Lucille Ball; Oct. 22, As You Desire Me with Greta Garbo and Eric von Stroheim.
