

ASUN proclaims migration

by Jane Owens

ASUN Senate Wednesday invoked one of its little known constitutional powers and declared the weekend of Nov. 3-5 an official UNL migration to the Nebraska-Colorado football game. The game will be played in Boulder.

ASUN executives said they plan to talk to James Pittenger, athletic ticket manager, and ask that 50 percent of the tickets to the Nebraska-Colorado game be allotted to UNL students. Students currently are allotted 28 percent of the tickets. In 1965, Pittenger and ASUN reached an agreement to allot about 25 percent of all tickets to students for migrations.

Sam Brower, ASUN first vice president, said: "We're hopeful that we can again reach an agreement (with Pittenger), but technically have no way of forcing him."

If the ticket office agrees with the resolution, the number of student tickets available for the Nebraska-Colorado game would increase from 1,000 to 1,750. A ticket lottery to determine who gets tickets will begin next week.

A second resolution, introduced by Sen. John Burg, which will establish a Library Research Committee also was approved. Consisting of administrators, faculty and students, the committee will study the UNL library system and suggest improvements. Committee findings will be presented to the senate and used to lobby with the UNL administration and state legislature for adequate library funding.

"A multitude of problems with the libraries has brought this resolution to the senate," said Brower.

Senators Dennis Slipenkoof and Marsha Hale, reported that the Lettuce Boycott Committee had talked to University food purchasing agents about purchasing non-union picked lettuce.

Last week the senate asked the University to boycott all non-union picked lettuce.

According to Hale, Nebraska Union Food Service Manager Bob Richeson said that the Union purchases union-picked lettuce.

Hale said that Douglas Rix, coordinator of food services, supports the proposed student boycott, but says we "should start the boycott at the student level."

On another matter, ASUN President Bruce Beecher, said that an ASUN letter to Ralph Bradley, corporation secretary for the Board of Regents asking for an open hearing with the board before University bylaws are approved, has been forwarded to the regents.

Committee appointments: Mike Balter; Faculty Senate Committee on Scholarships and Financial Aids; John Freeman, Chief Justice of the Student Court; Dave Sprague, Student Tribunal; Behrooz Eman, chairman, Human Rights Committee; and Stan Feuerberg and Marsha Hale; Scholastic Appeals. No unexcused absences.

Student affairs interns—'bombed on the head'

"An internship is like getting bombed on the head with a challenge."

That's the way Ely Myerson, student affairs vice-chancellor of administration, explained the Undergraduate Student Internship Program to its four UNL interns Wednesday.

The main objectives of the program are to acquaint students with professional ethics, provide students with an in-depth understanding of the structure and various services of the University, provide the University with student input and to provide the departments of Student Affairs with qualified student workers to perform special tasks.

The four chosen from 74 applicants were Susan Warren, Ann Pedersen, Denise Gamache and Jane Tinstman. They will work in the counseling center, financial aids office, foreign students office and the recreation department respectively.
