

Berg says press not good critic

Darrel Berg Tuesday told members of the UNL Sigma Delta Chi chapter that the institutional press is not as critical of an incumbent's political history as it should be.

Berg, Democratic challenger for the Nebraska's first district House of Representatives' seat, and legislative candidate Steve Fowler discussed their views of the press as newcomers to the political scene.

Berg said the press should put more emphasis on an incumbent's voting record during a campaign.

Fowler said the belief that news has to be current forces candidates to create news. He said he thought there was "need for more candidate analysis by the press."

"You don't have to run comment on whether the (candidate's) votes were good or bad," Fowler said. "Just give them."

When asked why the institutional press was not as critical as it could be, Berg said: "Vested interests, economic interests distort its perception."

Card pranksters punished?

Contrary to a University statement issued over the weekend sources close to several students involved in last week's card section mischief say those involved received little or no punishment from the University Student Affairs office.

The release said the students were disciplined for their part in the Nebraska-Missouri game prank.

Ken Bader, vice chancellor for student affairs, said in the release that none of those involved are current members of Corn Cobs, the student spirit organization which manages the card section.

Candidates speak in Union program

The Nebraska Union Program Council Talks and Topics Committee has scheduled a series of campus speeches by Nebraska politicians prior to the November general election.

Democratic candidate for the First Congressional District, Darrel Berg, will speak tonight at 7:30 in the Union.

Berg was unopposed in the May primary election. He faces Charles Thone, incumbent Republican congressman, in November.

Thone will be speaking in the Union next Wednesday.

U.S. Sen. Carl Curtis is scheduled to speak in the Union Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

His Democratic opponent, State Sen. Terry Carpenter, has not yet agreed to a campus appearance.
