Spanish students offered written, oral course option

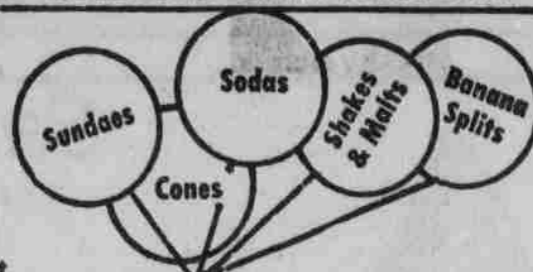

Students taking Spanish in the College of Arts and Sciences now can choose between a primarily written or primarily oral course to complete the second and third semesters of their language group requirement.

The college's Curriculum Committee this week accepted the oral course as an alternative. Currently only the Spanish department offers the choice, according to Arts and Sciences Student Advisory Board member Tom Weist.

Weist said he believed the French and German departments were considering a parallel program.
