

Husker determination not enough for win

Nebraska's basketball team was far from discouraged after dropping a 65-59 decision to Wyoming at Laramie, Wyo., Friday night.

"I was very pleased with the determination we showed," Nebraska head coach Joe Cipriano said. "There hasn't been that type of determination on our team in the last couple of years."

The determination Cipriano was referring to was Nebraska's come-from-behind effort after trailing by 13 points early in the game. Nebraska whittled the Wyoming lead to three points with 1:46 left in the game before the Cornhuskers missed three straight fieldgoals to give Wyoming the six-point win.

"They trapped us with some unusual situations on defense, and we couldn't get our offense going early in the game," Cipriano said, "but our kids showed a lot of poise and played well in the second half."

The Huskers, who shot 53 per cent in their opening win against North Texas State, hit a dismal 33 per cent of their shots against Wyoming. The Cowboys shot 53 per cent from the field.

Senior guard Tom Gregory led Nebraska's scoring with 13 points. Don Jackson and Jerry Fort, who both fouled out had eight points each.

Junior College transfer Ron Crowell paced the Cowboys with 13 points. Rod Penner, a 6-10 center, and freshman Jack Adams each had 11 points.

Wyoming had a decisive advantage in rebounds. The Cowboys scored four field goals after grabbing rebounds on missed freethrows.

"We would have been better off if we would have been called for goal tending on freethrows," Cipriano said. Wyoming hit only seven of 17 freethrows.

The Cornhuskers, 1-1 on the season, travel to Morgantown, West Va., Friday and Saturday to compete in the Mountaineer Classic. Other entrants include host West Virginia, Air Force and California.

Glover announced as '72 Outland winner

When Nebraska defensive tackle Larry Jacobson was informed he had won the Outland Trophy last year, a rather quizzical expression rushed across his face.

"What is it?" Jacobson replied. "I've never hear of the Outland Trophy."

But Cornhusker middle guard Rich Glover was well aware of the Outland Trophy when he was announced the 1972 Outland Trophy winner Saturday. In fact, the award has been one of Glover's goals the past season.

"When Jake won the Outland last year I set a goal that I wanted to win it next year," Glover said. "I never would have thought it possible three years ago, but after things started going good last year I set a goal to win all those linemen awards."

The selections of Jacobson and Glover gave Nebraska an unprecedented back-to-back sweep of the nation's top prize for interior linemen.

The Outland Trophy is named for the late Dr. John H. Outland, a Kansas City surgeon who died in 1947. In the mid 1940s, Dr. Outland suggested to former Des Moines sportswriter Bert McGrane that some honor be established for interior linemen.

Dr. Outland played tackle for Kansas in the 1890s, then went to Penn. as a medical student and played Ivy League football. He was named an all-American tackle in 1896 and again as a halfback in 1897.

Prompted by Dr. Outland's suggestion, the football writers took up the cause and established the award in 1946, with George Connor of Notre Dame the first recipient.

Only four Big Eight players have ever won the award—Oklahoma's Jim Weatherall in 1951 and J. D. Roberts in 1953. Jacobson was the next to win the award.

Ice hockey club loses to ISU

Iowa State's ice hockey club scored three goals in the first three minutes and clasted to a 13-0 victory against Nebraska Saturday night at Ak-Sar-Ben. It was the first game for Nebraska's year-old hockey club.

"It was an experience," Nebraska's John Larson said. "Iowa State's the best team I've ever played against—they're all consistently good skaters."

Last year Iowa State was 23-5 against schools like North Dakota, St. Olaf of Northfield, Minn., and Colorado College.

"We were discouraged after the first period when the score was 6-0," Larson said, "but we came off the ice with a pretty good attitude. They're just good. They've been organized for five years and about half the team is from Canada."

Iowa State received $27,000 last year, a large percentage of which was from private donations. Nebraska is working with about $400 a year.

"I think they've been cut back a little this year because they were starting to outdraw the basketball team," Larson said.

All student Bowl tickets available until Wednesday

All students who signed up for Orange Bowl tickets will receive tickets, according to University of Nebraska ticket manager Jim Pittenger.

Tickets can be picked up and paid for Monday through Wednesday. Ticket price is $8.50. Those tickets not claimed by Wednesday, Dec. 8, at 4 p.m. will be cancelled and placed on sale to the general public.
