

Convocation honors UNL students, faculty

Presentation of six distinguished teaching awards and four C.S. Boucher Awards highlighted the 45th Annual Honors Convocation held Tuesday in the Coliseum. About 2,700 students were honored.

The Chancellor's Award, given for the first time, went to Lawrence Berger, professor of law. Robert Hough, professor of English, won the Annis Chaikin Sorensen Award for distinguished teaching in the humanities.

Other winners of Distinguished Teaching Awards were Dorcas Cavett, assistant professor of elementary education, Jacqueline Voss, assistant professor of human development and the family, Gary Peterson, associate professor of zoology, and Robert Fuller, associate professor of physics.

Each winner received $1,000 and a Distinguished Teaching medalion.

The Boucher Awards go to the Officers Training Corps member, senior athletic letterman, senior woman, and senior man who have the highest four-year cumulative grade average.

Robert Krecklow, journalism major, won the ROTC award with his 3.627 average. Mathematics major and football player David Mason won the athletic award with his 3.132 average.

Heading the senior women was Marilyn Johnson, mathematics major, who has a 4.067 average. Highest overall average was recorded by senior male winner Ronald Aerni, chemical engineering major. He has a 4.072 average.

Superior scholarship awards went to 263 seniors who ranked in the upper three per cent of their college or who have been on the honors list since their freshman year. A number of students in all classes were recognized for high scholarship.

Honors Convocation . . . parents and students assemble to recognize UNL achievers.

Banjo pickin' rodeo top Western Week festivities

Some banjo pickin' and a rodeo will be featured events at Western Week, sponsored this week by the East Campus Union. Although wintry weather forced postponement of outdoor games and a barbecue scheduled for today, the events have been rescheduled for next Wednesday at 2:30 p.m.

But those events were just a few of the Western Week activities on East Campus.

As one of the newer events at UNL, Western Week has retained interest and support while interest in other traditions like Ivy Day and the yearbook has dropped in recent years.

An addition to this year's activities is a free bluegrass concert by Bill Monroe and the Bluegrass Boys and the Bluegrass Crusaders. The concert will be held Friday evening in the East Campus Activity Building, according to Jinger Jorgensen, co-chairman of Western Week.

Jorgensen said that Western Week will try to attract more City Campus students. "It has been hard to get them out in the past," she said.

Activities planned for the remainder of the week are:

 We Need A Local Agent

If you're the type of person to collect furry little creatures, then come out to Mr. Donut. No, we don't have any working for us—but we do have a free little bunny rabbit to give away. In fact, we have two to give away. Come out and drop a drawing into the contest box. (And have a few donuts while you're at it.)
