Lack of money hurts trips

By Ruth Ulrich
School of Journalism

Money problems seem to have kept many University of Nebraska-Lincoln students from going on the travel-study flights to Mexico and Japan which were scheduled for the pre-session period, according to Zoya Zeman, coordinator of the Overseas Opportunities Center, and UNL faculty member Peter Cheng.

Around 20 UNL and University of Nebraska-Omaha students participated in the Mexico flight, May 21 to June 7, Miss Zeman said. Of these, 16 took the course in criminal justice taught by UNO professor Jim Kane, which was a survey of the Mexican criminal system as compared to the American system.

UNL student Christine Clapp said she and several others went with the group, but did sightseeing on their own in and around Mexico City. They visited such places as the National Cathedral and the National Museum of Anthropology, she said.

Miss Zeman said she feels more students would have been able to go if the trip had been organized sooner. Also, she said students weren't used to trips being offered at this time of the year.

Plans are being made for a similar flight next year, Miss Zeman said. This is an opportunity to see another part of the world which is "right at our doorstep," she added.

Cheng said that 30 to 40 students inquired about the Japan trip, which was scheduled for May 25 to June 8, but because of the high cost of room and board on the trip, none were able to go and the trip was cancelled.

He said he felt it would be beneficial to make contact with the universities in Japan in an attempt to cut room and board expenses.

Donates $326,500

The University of Nebraska's Class of 1923 announced June 15 at its 50th anniversary reunion that one of its members had donated securities valued at $326,500.

The donor is Mrs. Foster G. McGaw of Evanston, Illinois, who received her bachelor of arts degree from the University in 1923.

In making the gift to the University of Nebraska Foundation, Mrs. McGaw said it was in honor of "the occasion of the 50th anniversary of my graduation from the University and as a memorial to my mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Louis E. Welling, who lived in Lincoln."

According to Harry R. Haynie, president of the Foundation, the agreement stipulated that the gift will establish two endowed funds, with the annual income used to support:

—"The McGaw Memorial Professorship in Medicine" at the University Medical Center at Omaha. This professorship honors her husband who has spent his entire business career in the hospital field. McGaw is honorary chairman, founder and director of American Hospital Supply Corporation. The area and specialization of the professorship will be determined by the Chancellor of the Medical Center, based upon the greatest need, Haynie said.

—"The Wetting Memorial Fund for Legal Education." The specific use to be determined from time to time by the Dean of the Law College to meet the greatest need.

The University Foundation also reported that 151 members of the Class of 1923 contributed an additional $2,510.00. Gifts from the Classes of 1913, 1933, 1943, 1948, and 1963 totaled $13,169.00 in honor of their reunion, Haynie said.

13 new shops at 12th and Q

The old Western Electric building at the corner of 12th and Q Streets will be transformed into two levels of shops and five stories of parking.

Roger Sack of Superior Equity and architect James Haberlan are working together to renovate the building. The renovation will cost about $1 million, according to Bill Coveney, who is leasing the building for Sack and Haberlan.

Coveney said there will be a wide mall bisecting the building with eight shops on the first floor and five shops and a restaurant on the lower level. There is parking for 175 automobiles and elevator service to the parking area will be provided.

Kingery Construction Co. will begin work at the end of June, Coveney said, and construction should be completed in about nine months.

The building will contain all types of retail stores, including college-oriented shops.

There will be no changes on the outside of the building, except for cleaning, he said.
