

More jobs open this summer

Job hunters should seldom hear discouraging words around Lincoln this summer. Indications are that there is more work available than in previous summers.

Doug Sever, University of Nebraska - Lincoln financial aids adviser, said the students who are looking for jobs, whether part-time or full-time, should come to the financial aids office.

Severs, who coordinates student employment for the office, tries to match the experiences and interests of students with available jobs.

He has been going out and recruiting jobs from employers in the Lincoln area and hopes to find a variety of work situations.

Also, he wants to "get an idea of what students face when they are out looking," he said, so he can be of more help to job-seekers.

Openings on KRNU

Current job openings are broadcast daily over KRNU (90.3 FM) at 10:15 a.m., 12:15 and 4:15 p.m.

He said that he also posts available jobs in the Union. Students need not be eligible for financial aid to be placed by the office.

According to Doug Treado, the financial aids adviser in charge of the work-study program, the office was able to place about 400 students in work-study this summer. The majority of these jobs were on campus, he said.

Because of a 20 per cent budget cut, however, fewer students will be eligible for work-study in the fall. The office will place around 700 in work-study positions as opposed to 830 last fall.

At the State Employment Service, Gene Landkamer, manager of the Lincoln office, said that more jobs appear to be available this summer and people "seem to be finding it easier to find jobs themselves."

Easier for inexperienced

Those who haven't had much work experience, usually the first to feel the pinch when jobs are scarce, should find it easier to get work this summer, he said.

Private employment agencies also report that they are able to find work for those who need it.

Manpower Inc., a temporary help service, has placed primarily office workers and laborers, the owner, Patricia Beck said. She encourages those who haven't been able to find work and are interested in temporary employment to come see her.

Office workers busy

Kelly Services, another temporary help agency, has no problem keeping office workers busy, but it is difficult to place individuals without skills, according to Coleda Matulis, supervisor.

She said that the firm finds jobs for many teachers and others who need temporary work, such as someone recently out of the service or between jobs.

Assignments vary from one or two days to an indefinite length of time for office workers.

In the labor division, workers report in the morning and wait for employers to call in for labor. She said that the agency has had no trouble keeping laborers employed on a day-to-day basis and that there was a good chance for work for anyone wanting it.

Financial aid cut $745,954 from 1972-73

Federal funds for student financial aid at the University of Nebraska - Lincoln have been cut $745,954 below those allocated for the 1972-73 academic year.

Kenneth Bader, vice chancellor for student affairs, said the cut "will have many ramifications for students who attend the University."

"The new allocations for educational opportunity grants and work-study are below the current fiscal year," Bader said. "This means that we will try to stretch the available dollars to the absolute limit. The new basic opportunity grants will fall short of meeting the need as a result of the Federal cuts."

The allocations for the 1973-74 fiscal year compared with those for the 1972-73 fiscal year in parentheses are: National Direct Student Loan Funds, $555,566 ($756,562); supplemental Educational Opportunity Grant Funds, $310,102 ($699,308), and Work-Study Funds, $565,835 ($721,587).

Jack Ritchie, director of Scholarships and Financial Aids, said notices will be mailed by mid-July to those freshmen who applied for aid by February 15 and upperclassmen who applied by the March 1 deadline. Those who applied after the deadlines will not be notified until early August.

"Because of the cut in federal funds, it will be impossible for us to allocate to students all the funds they are eligible to receive," Ritchie said. "In such instances, the only other available source of funds will be guaranteed loans through local banks and employment. The Office of Scholarships and Financial Aids also is serving as headquarters for all student employment opportunities, both full and part-time."

A new sound in town . . .

that'll blow your walls down!
(Available only from a Newfangler)

While "Cerwin Vega" is not a name that you'll hear being bandied around, it is a name that is quite well known and thought of in musician's circles. Cerwin Vega is new in the home stereo speaker business and so is its sound. The Cerwin Vega 24's, pictured above, produce the biggest, boldest new sounds around . . . and they accomplish this more efficiently than any other speaker available today. For example, we've matched the Vega 24's with a Sherwood 7050 AM/FM receiver. The Sherwood 7050 has adequate power for most speakers but with the "Vegas" you can approach live rock concert sound levels in a good sized room. The neat part is that the system costs only $359 . . . and that includes the BSR 310 turntable with base, dustcover, and Shure cartridge. See a Newfangler for a demonstration and tell him you want to see the "Vegas" blow his walls down . . . if they do we'd appreciate it if you'd stick around and help him pick up the pieces.
