

Radial debate persists during study update

Persons concerned with the Northeast Radial Hwy's future are awaiting completion of a transportation study to be finished in late 1974, according to Robert Obering, director of Lincoln's public works department.

Obering said Lincoln, Lancaster County and federal officials are working to "update" the transportation study completed in 1966.

The original study, he said, projected that traffic volume in 1985 would be too large for Cornhusker Hwy.

"We based our study on population growth, land development and projected trips to specific city areas. The facts seemed to point to the need for a radial highway," Obering said.

City Councilman John Robinson said improvements in Cornhusker Hwy. would be more logical than building a new radial. "Cornhusker Hwy. is a suitable route to channel traffic between northeast Lincoln and the downtown area," he said.

J.R. Downing Sr., president of the Coalition Against the Northeast Radial would damage property value wherever it would pass through residential areas.

"Persons living on Fremont St. especially will be affected. We have a quiet neighborhood, and all this talk about future increased traffic problems is unjustified," he said.

Downing said he felt there is no chance of persuading Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf to change his viewpoint on the Northeast Radial. "We've given up on him. His mind is set on building the Radial, and that's that," he said.

Schwartzkopf said he has not formed his final opinion on the Northeast Radial. "I'm capable of deciding for myself, and I don't need people telling me what I think and don't think. Whether we have the Radial or not will depend on what the transportation study comes up with," he said.

Schwartzkopf said he will form his final opinion on the Northeast Radial following the study.

Robinson said that from a "legal standpoint", highways running through residential areas without consideration of the impact on area residents is contrary to federal law.

He said he has proposed a resolution which would "incorporate the utility" of citizen groups in helping to plan city projects. The resolution, he said, was unanimously approved by the City Council.

Robinson said that this seems to suggest the Council's interest in social planning, but warned that it was not an indication of their disapproval of the Northeast Radial.

The resolution has resulted in the creation of a citizens committee which will develop an "action plan" telling of needed community improvements, he said.

The committee is made up of 25 Lincoln residents, he said, and will hold its second public meeting tonight at City Hall.

ASUN budget

Dave Howlett, chairman of the Free University Committee, hopes to generate more interest in the program by offering a two-day conference on consumerism and following up with courses, seminars and workshops. Ralph Nader and John Gardner of Common Cause are being considered as speakers, as well as business executives and local consumer advocates.

How and where Free University will pick up the money for the conference remains to be worked out. However, other committee chairpersons have expressed strong support for Howlett's idea.

Absent from the budget this year are cultural affairs and student government conferences.

The Cultural Affairs Committee was funded last year through nonrecurring funds. The committee's budget request was turned in late this year and it will now have to fight for a share of the $8,000 in Student Organizations and Activities.

If funds do not become available, Cultural Affairs may be forced to cancel the St. Louis Symphony's concert, according to Ron Bowlin, coordinator for the committee.

Student government conferences were axed because ASUN decided that other projects were of higher priority.
