Third, he said the funds used to purchase the articles were not from Fund B as stated in the story, but from accumulated revenue in the Facilities Fund.

He later said, however, that the facilities fund was that half of what was formerly call student fees not routed through student government for budgeting. The Board of Regents last summer changed the name from student fees to the University Program and Facilities Fees, and the half not routed through student government became Fund B.

The Gateway editorial said, "The chancellor had no valid basis for his attack on the Gateway report. The story gave an accurate account of the purchases made, contrary to the chancellor's wordy attempt to demean the paper before the student body representatives."

The measure of an order may be taken in the measure of its men.

In the beginning there was Isaac Hecker.

He founded the order in 1858 and his aim was to create an order of priests who would be able to meet the needs of the North American people as they arose in each era, each age. Modern priests who would be modern men.

Part of the success of this order, he believed, would lie in the fact that each man would be himself, contributing his own individual talents in his own way for the total good. "The individuality of man," he said, "cannot be too great when he is guided by the spirit of God."

And that is just what the Paulists are—individualists. We're proud of our men and of each and every individual contribution—great and small.

Whether the Paulist keeps boys off city streets by restoring and re-planting a city park or wins awards for a remarkable TV series—he is responding to the needs as he sees them.

Wherever he serves—in a parish or an inner city school ... a youth center or on campus ... a welfare shelter or in a prison ... joining a senior citizens group or in radio, television or publishing, the Paulist is making his own contribution, and keeping alive Father Hecker's dream.

After all, there is a lot to live up to and an order is only as good as its men.
