Psychologist/astrologer Zipporah Dobyns

Astrologist attacks 'garbage' horoscopes

By Jim Fullerton

Astrological horoscopes found in newspapers are garbage according to psychologist/astrologer Zipporah Dobyns. She maintains such mini-horoscopes are misleading. "There are certainly more than 12 kinds of people in the world," she said.

Dobyns spoke Thursday, in the Nebraska Union, and would have concluded the Talks and Topics series sponsored by the Union Program Council had not astronaut Edgar Mitchell's address been postponed because of illness.

She said she dislikes the materialistic ideals of astrology used in such horoscopes (which are strictly the physical positions of the planets) and sides with the humanistic view that takes psychic occurrences (information that can't be explained by material senses) into account.

She attacked such closed mind astrology with a story about a computer loaded with typical newspaper horoscopes. The horoscope of a notorious murderer was determined and sent to people all over the country with the proviso that they must reply and how it applied to them. Approximately, 90 per cent answered that they and their families agreed it fit them perfectly, thus supporting the argument that they are too general.

Dobyns said over the past 17 years to 18 years of her life she has been searching for self awareness and consciousness through tarot and I Ching playing cards, handwriting analysis, psychoanalysis and other methods, but astrology she said has given her the most and best answers.

She says a person's horoscope is "a mirror, not a mold," and when done properly can be changed.

Every 20 years, since 1840, the President of the United States has died while holding that office, but she says the string will be broken in the year 2000.
