Bader: totality of education more than formal classroom

By Dave Madsen

"The central purpose of a university should be to provide learning experiences for its students, and although the faculty is the key to these experiences, the totality of education is much more and much greater than the formal classroom education," he said.

Between puffs on his pipe, he made it clear that an important part of a university is the interaction between students and faculty, between students and administration and among students.

He said that a university should provide a "real life experience," and that "I find it hard to say that we (UNL) are doing that."

He is Ken Bader, vice chancellor for student affairs.

Bader came to UNL in September 1972 from Ohio State University (OSU) where he had been dean of students since 1968. He was graduated from OSU in 1956 with a bachelor of science degree in agricultural education. Bader received his master of science in agronomy the following year, and in 1960 he received his doctorate in agronomy, both from OSU.

Bader described his job as "providing leadership to the staff that provides the programs that will enrich students at the University."

He said that he encourages students to get a "total education." He works with the faculty and staff in providing "environmental qualities conducive to learning," he said.

Bader said that activities such as the Pete Seeger concert and the talk by former astronaut Edgar Mitchell are valuable tools for the enhancement and enrichment of the university education.

He said he has become more confident in talking with students since coming to UNL.

"The people in Nebraska are really friendly and easy to talk with," he said. "I have a sense of confidence I didn't feel at OSU."

Bader said he supports student self-determination on the campus issues of See Bader, Page 3.

Fraternity scares up money for charity

Three days and 600 people later, the Theta Xi spookarama has netted about $475, most of the proceeds of which will go to the Muscular Dystrophy Assoc., according to Jim Rowolvt.

Rowolvt, Theta Xi spookarama coordinator, said sales tax and expenses incurred by Theta Xi for the spookarama would come out of the amount. The remainder will go to Muscular Dystrophy.

Even though it involved much work and temporary inconvenience for members of Theta Xi fraternity, where the spookarama was, plans to make it an annual event were generally approved by Theta Xi, according to him.

Rowolvt said more adults than children visited the spookarama. Most of the visitors seemed to enjoy it, and the spookarama even managed to scare some, he said.

Correction....

On page nine of Friday's Daily Nebraskan, John Dzerk, operational manager for the UNL Physical Plant, was mistakenly identified as the operational manager of the custodian service.

Some of the information attributed to Dzerk should have been attributed to a night supervisor who had asked to remain anonymous.
