NU given $2,000 Kodak grant

NU is among 118 four-year colleges and universities receiving a direct grant from the Eastman Kodak Company's 1973 Educational Aid Program.

The grants are based on the number of graduates from universities who joined Kodak within five years after graduation and are now in their fifth year of employment.

Dave Holst and Tom Redding, both 1968 NU graduates, are the two students hired by Kodak and now in their fifth year with the company.

Kodak contributes $250 for each academic year completed by their employees at a publicly supported school. NU received a grant of $2,000—$1,000 for each of the two men who completed four years at NU.

The company gives special grants to major colleges and universities for capital improvements and endowments to liberal arts schools offering curricula of particular interest to the company near the company's major manufacturing and administrative facilities.

Trucking isn't just for truck drivers.

It's also for college graduates.

The American trucking industry is a vast, complex, sophisticated transportation network. A network that moves almost anything you can think of. Almost anywhere you can think of.

And to keep things running smoothly, it needs people. All kinds of people. From computer analysts to cost accountants. Traffic controllers to communications specialists. People like you.

In return, trucking offers you good pay.

Plus a chance to grow fast and go as high as you want to. Because trucking is booming. And it's already the largest and fastest growing segment of the transportation industry. So you can start to contribute some mighty important things to the cause. Now. Not ten years from now.

How do you start a career in this dynamic business?

It's easy, if you know where to look. First, try your placement office. See if there are any trucking concerns interviewing. Next, check out your college placement manual for names and addresses. Finally, look to the surrounding area for companies in operation.

Find out for yourself what a great career trucking can be. Even if you don't drive.
