Quintet to perform baroque era music

By Diane Wanek

The Baroque Ensemble, USSR has been highly acclaimed by the International Press: "The Ensemble is an excellent ensemble of musicians. They are masters of their instruments...fine taste and profound feeling for the style."

The ensemble will perform French, German and Russian baroque pieces in concert Friday evening as part of the Lincoln Friends of Chamber Music's ninth season.

The quintet of woodwinds and strings, although only four years old, has given more than four hundred concerts in Russia, Poland and West Germany. On their present American tour, they will try to acquaint American audiences with little-known composers excerpted from a wealth of Russian literature in music.

The ensemble has done much research and reconstruction in the Kremlin Archives resulting in authenticity and reconstruction of details of ground bass and other baroque techniques. Moreover, the ensemble's special project this season is to present selections from Bach's monumental works: The Art of the Fugue and The Musical Offering.

Included in Friday's program will be works by de Boismortier, Leclair, Telemann, Beresovsky and an anonymous 18th century Russian composer.

The ensemble's personnel includes: Igor Popkov on violin, a graduate of the Moscow Conservatory and former member of the Moscow Chamber Orchestra; Anatoly Korchagin on oboe; Alexander Sobolev, the Laureate of the International Contest, on harpsichord; Boris Shiskin, cellist; and Alexander Poplavsky, flautist.

Admission to the concert, which begins at 8 p.m. in the Sheldon Gallery Auditorium, is by season tickets. There are still some season tickets left, according to chairman Nelson Potter, and a reduced rate is available. They may be purchased at Sheldon. If the concert is not sold out, students may be admitted for a $1.50 admission price, he added.
