

Air Force intensifies recruiting of women

Jobs for women in the military are most numerous in the Air Force, according to Col. Bobbie Bobbitt, director of women in the Air Force.

In Air Pulse, a weekly publication of Offutt Air Force Base, Bobbitt said there are literally hundreds of jobs qualified women can perform in the Air Force.

She emphasized that jobs are not limited to administration, personnel, medical specialties and other areas traditionally filled by women. Technical jobs in such fields as maintenance, engineering, computer science, weather, space systems and communications-electronics also are available, she said.

She said the Air Force plans to increase the current strength of more than 16,000 women to 44,500 by 1978.

An equal rights amendment to the Constitution is being considered. "If ratified by the states, this amendment could have considerable impact on women in the armed forces," she said, "not only in terms of numbers, but also in the standards of selection, the kinds of jobs they will hold and whether they should attend the service academies."

The major question raised by the amendment is whether women should be used as combatants.

"By law, women line officers and enlisted women may not be assigned to aircraft crews engaged in combat," Bobbitt said. "The Air Force does not have limited-duty flying personnel—that is, personnel on flying duty who are not qualified to fly in combat."

"Efforts are being made to recruit more women as dentists, doctors, optometrists and biomedical scientists," she said.

a mock-rock musical

We're pioneering
A new sound in town . . .

that'll blow your walls down!
(Available only from a Newfangler)

Chances are good that you've heard the new sound of Cerwin Vega but weren't aware of it at the time. The reason is because you were probably at a dance and it was reproducing their big, clean sound of the group that was playing. The name Cerwin Vega is well known and thought of as Musician's Circle and now it is available in stereo speakers and so is its sound. The Cerwin Vega 74's pictured above reproduce the biggest, loudest new sounds around and they accomplish this more efficiently than any other speaker available today. For example, we've installed the Vegas with a Pioneer 424 AM-FM receiver. The Pioneer 424 will have no problem playing the Vegas at near live rock concert sound levels in a good sized room. The system also includes the Garard 42 M-5 turntable with base and M75 tone armage.

See a Newfangler and tell him you want to see a demonstration. We'll blow his walls down . . . and blow your mind.
