Brass set to include
Christmas selections

Christmas music will add a holiday flavor to the concert by the UNL School of Music brass ensemble. The free program starts at 8 p.m.
Thursday in Kimball Recital Hall.

The first piece will be "The Exorcism" by Walter Ross.
Originally written to fit a poem, it was first composed with an accompanying dance, said Jack Snider, professor of music, who will conduct the brass ensemble.

"The piece has lots of rhythmical, moody effects," Snider said. "The Exorcism" sets percussion against the brass in five movements. The rhythm is provided by tympani, vibes, xylophone, bells, temple blocks and maracas.

"Concerto Antifonale," written in 1966 by Vaclav Nelhybel, divides the ensemble into three sections: a three-piece solo and two choirs. Snider described the four-movement work as rhythmic, but with much melody and harmony.
Nelhybel uses adjacent instruments to create strong dissonance.

The holiday emphasis opens the second half of the program, in "Suite of Carols," arranged by Leroy Anderson.

The concert ends with a medley of "Deck the Halls" and "Here We Go A-Caroling" in a new arrangement by Jerry Fielding.

The brass ensemble consists of 6 trumpets, 2 euphonias, 5 horns, 2 tuba, 4 trombones and 3 percussionists.

Snider added that anyone who is not in an ensemble and would like to play next semester should see him or Albert Rometo before semester break.
