

Harper 8 . . .

There are no organized study groups on the floor, but five floor members—two pre-med majors, an engineering major, a chemistry major and an electrical engineering major—frequently get together and study in the "Harper Hilton," room 828.

Not all 8th floor residents are regents scholarship winners, and not everyone lives on 8th for purely scholastic reasons.

Bob Burns, a junior majoring in economics, said he decided to live on Harper 8 because he knew several people on the floor.

Sophomore Dave Madsen said he moved to the floor for basically the same reasons, although he said he did think 8th floor was completely different from other floors and that it had "an air of academic community."

The interest shown in student government by some floor members was an added attraction for him, he said. Madsen, who initiated a letter writing campaign for the alcohol bill, said he likes to consider himself and other 8th floor actives as "government muckrakers."

Wiltse, a political science major and an active participant in UNL government, said his governmental interests and those of floor members complement one another.

Eighth floor is an initiator in residence hall government, he said. For example, Wiltse asked the regents this month for a definition of the word "room" as used in the UNL Student Code of Conduct.

Architecture major Dave Irvin noted that about 80% of floor members graduated from Omaha North High School.

The letters, and knowing people who already live on the floor, probably account for part of 8th floor's drawing power, Irvin said.

Joe Schenk, a freshman, remarked that incoming freshmen, who don't know many people at UNL and are unsure of where they are going to live, often decide to live on 8th floor after receiving an invitation letter.

According to Madsen and Burns, the floor has a low number of violation violations and has "their share—not anymore or any less" of alcohol violations.

The floor's "official graffiti sheets" (paper taped up in the floor bathrooms for residents to write on) are an item that most floor members are particularly proud of, members agreed.

A fido newspaper, "The Liberator," and a group of "radical crazies," who made up the Harper Liberation Front, were a part of Harper 8 a few years ago, Irvin said. The liberation front tried to secede from Harper Hall because they disagreed with hall governmental policy about money allotted to floors.

Correction . . .

Gov. J. Jans's Exon has recommended appropriating $36.2 million for construction of the new UNL Life Sciences Bldg. An article and the editorial in Wednesday's Daily Nebraskan incorrectly said that Exon's recommendation was $2 million. The Daily Nebraskan regrets the error.

STAFF WRITERS NEEDED

The Daily Nebraskan needs more staff writers. If you are interested, see Jane Owens, Rm. 34 Nebraska Union to apply. Journalism experience is preferred, but the Nebraskan will hire inexperienced writers with potential.
