Dienstbier new Psych Dept. chairman

By Mary Beth Grange
It took the new chairman of the UNL Psychology Dept., eight years to get his bachelors degree.
Richard Dienstbier says he tells his students this "to keep them from losing hope."
After three years in the Army, lots of night school classes and full-time jobs, Dienstbier was graduated from the University of Rhode Island in 1960. He got his masters degree there and his doctorate in 1969 at the University of Rochester in Rochester, N.Y.

He steps into the chairmanship after five years at UNL—"The first job I've had."
"It doesn't seem like a promotion," Dienstbier said. "It's a thing I'm going to do for awhile."
"I really like to teach and love to do research," the 34-year-old professor said. "I'll still do research and still teach, but a little less."

Dienstbier's concerns next year include 600 undergraduate psychology majors, the department's graduate program and 21 faculty members.
"People are tremendously interested in psychology today," he explained. "We are trying to meet student demands and student needs."

"Psychology enrollment is skyrocketing," Dienstbier said. "We can't grow in staff as fast as enrollment increases." Five years ago the department had 13 faculty members. Today there are 21.

"Right now psychology is one of the two highest rated departments in the University," Dienstbier said. "It is very important to keep quality high, keep on improving."

A 2-track major is one curriculum change being considered by the department. One option would be designed for students planning on graduate study. The other choice would be for "those interested but who don't choose or desire to take very rigorous types of courses," Dienstbier said.

Dienstbier said he "anticipates no big changes other than continuing development and change in curriculum."

Former chairman David Levine was "extraordinarily good" in his job, Dienstbier added. Levine will be going to England this summer.

Although his interests range from making beer and wine to long distance running, Dienstbier said research is more than work, it is a hobby too.

"I like psychology an awful lot," the new chairman said.
