

Doctor named to act as clinic director

Dr. Kenneth O. Hubble, a psychiatrist who has been director of the University's Mental Health Clinic since 1971, has been named acting Executive Medical Director of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Health Center, according to Vice Chancellor Kenneth L. Bader.

He will serve until a search committee has completed its work and a director has been named to succeed Dr. Samuel I. Fuenning, who has been appointed director of the Nebraska Center for Health Education at NU.

Both the appointments of Dr. Hubble and Dr. Fuenning were announced subject to approval of the Board of Regents.

Dr. Hubble earned his M.D. from the Chicago Medical School and did his work in psychiatry at the NU College of Medicine's Nebraska Psychiatric Institute.

He has been a staff psychiatrist at the Lincoln Regional Center and the NU Health Center, and was executive director of the Child Guidance Center in Lincoln.

As acting director, Dr. Hubble will begin implementation of a new Health Center organizational structure approved by Chancellor Zumberge and the Board of Regents. He will supervise the operations of the Health Center and will be directly in charge of medical and mental health services.

The search committee has held its first meeting. Members are Dr. William F. Nye, a Lincoln physician; Ms. Doris Johnson, director of laboratory services; and Dr. Ralph A. Ewert, physician at the Health Center; Dr. Robert B. Kugel, dean of the College of Medicine; and Ms. Lois Merrill associate dean of the College of Nursing, NUU Medical Center; Dean Ely Meyerson, Office of Student Affairs; and Ms. Diane Duven, a student. Another student will be appointed later.

According to Vice Chancellor Bader, the committee is seeking a director who would be an M.D. and would have strong administrative experience and capabilities.

Piano duo offers 2 music styles

Two distinct styles in music will be featured during a duo-piano recital on Tuesday, June 18, in Kimball Recital Hall.

The recital, which begins at 7:30 p.m., is free and open to the public.

Thomas Fritz, a professor of piano at the University of Nebraska - Lincoln, and Cary Lewis, who serves in the same capacity at Nebraska Wesleyan University, will be playing Rachmaninoff's light "Fantasy (Suite No. 2), Op. 5 for Pianos" and Bartok's abrasive "Sonata for Two Pianos and Percussion."

Fritz described Russian composer Rachmaninoff's work as "lush, melodious and very easy to listen to."

The four movements - "Barcarole," "A Night for Love," "Tears," and "Russian Easter," - were inspired by poems with the same titles and written in the romantic style. Rachmaninoff, who moved to America in 1917, wrote the composition in 1893.

In contrast to this number will be Hungarian-born Bartok's rhythmic, contemporary score which he wrote in 1937.

"The composition is exciting and has proven to be an important one which many other composers have copied," Fritz said.

Al Rometo, an NU instructor of percussion and Robert Snider, an undergraduate majoring in percussions, will accompany the pianists during this number.
