

All-Staters display talents

The 1974 All-State Fine Arts program for high school students at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln will conclude this week with concerts, dance performances, art exhibits, convocations and the final All-State Recital featuring the All-State Band, Chorus and Orchestra.

The All-State Band, under the direction of Jack Snider, and the 100-member All-State Chorus, under the direction of Raymond Miller, will perform in concert at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in Kimball Recital Hall.

A dual concert featuring the All-State Symphony Orchestra, Emmanuel Wishnow conducting, and the All-State Dancers will be presented at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in Kimball Recital Hall.

The orchestra portion will begin the program with performances of "Prelude and Quadruple Fugue" by Alan Hovhaness; the first movement of Schubert's Unfinished Symphony (Allegro moderato); and "The Great Gates of Kiev" from Moussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exhibition."

The All-State Dancers whose instructors during the three-week All-State program have included Barbara Mason of the NU Physical Education Department and Peggy Lyman of the Martha Graham Dance Studios in New York City, will present a two-part program. Beginning dancers in the All-State program will present performances of several dance selections, while the advanced students will provide a demonstration of classroom techniques in ballet and modern dancing.

The All-State program will conclude Friday with the All-State Final Concert, featuring performances by each of the major music ensembles formed during the three-week program—the All-State Orchestra, Chorus, and Band. The concert will be held in the Sculpture Garden of the Sheldon Memorial Art Gallery at 7:30 p.m.

Other events during the week will include an art exhibit to be held in Abel Sandoz Residence hall; "Acting Scenes" by All-State drama students at 9 a.m. Friday in the Nebraska Union; and a debate tournament at 10:30 a.m. Friday in Westbrook Music Building.

A final dinner for All-Staters, their parents, University of Nebraska Regents and administrators will be held at 5 p.m. Friday in Abel-Sandoz Dining Room.

Western art featured

The Sheldon Memorial Art Gallery at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln began showing a series of summer exhibitions of western art Sunday (June 23).

On display through Aug. 4 will be works from the collection of William Harmsen of Denver, Colo., whose privately owned paintings include more than 600 examples of western art.

Although the mountain-plains are rich in public collections of western art, there is little opportunity for most people to see the many private collections in the area.

The particular distinction of the Harmsen collection is in the fact that while the traditional criteria of quality have not been ignored they have been applied at a number of levels of judgement.

The exhibition is sponsored by the Nebraska Art Association and the First National Bank of Lincoln. A small sample of the pictures will be on view in the bank lobby throughout the exhibition.

Communications skills offered police in class

Improving communication skills of policemen is the objective of a continuing program being conducted for law enforcement officers by two University of Nebraska professors of speech communication.

Assistant Professors Vincent DiSalvo and William Seiler have been providing special training sessions at the Law Enforcement Training Center at Grand Island. They have also held training sessions at the Nebraska State Law Enforcement Seminar, and most recently, for the Lincoln Police Department.

The program for policemen is basically an adaptation of speech and communication skills that DiSalvo and Seiler have been teaching to a number of specialized groups throughout the state, including groups of elected public officials and supervisors, alcohol safety action program groups and teachers.

For the police program, DiSalvo and Seiler researched communications problems by riding patrol with policemen in squad cars and by observing internal police procedures at police headquarters.

Student awarded prize for design

Scott Kinzy, a recent graduate of the College of Architecture at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, has won a first place award in a national contest sponsored jointly by the American Institute of Architects and the National Clearinghouse for Criminal Justice Planning and Architecture.

Kinzy, of Omaha (801 S. 80th St.), received an $800 prize for his design of a medium-minimum security reformatory. The design was an outgrowth of a class project begun last fall by students in an architectural design course taught by NU Assistant Professor Allan A. Quick.

Kinzy's plan proposed that the new medium-minimum security facility be located around a lake near the present penal complex in Lincoln. The design was based on consultation with prison officials and inmates of the present reformatory, as well as research into prison reform literature.

The plan envisages a penal complex without cells or bars with prisoners housed in "five-man clusters." Each inmate would have his own unlocked room, and there would be a lounge-area to serve each of the clusters.

Kinzy said the plan was designed to "provide a normal living situation with security and control."

"The success of the facility would still depend on programs," Kinzy said. "The facility is designed to enhance rehabilitation programs."

Kinzy, who is now an architect for Neal Astic and Associates, plans to submit his drawings to the state for consideration. The contest in which he was awarded a prize was entered by 183 students in schools of architecture from across the nation.
