

Student lawyer nominated

A new lawyer for the student legal services program, David C. Rasmussen, has been chosen by the ASUN search committee. If the nomination of the new lawyer is approved by the Regents, Rasmussen will move into the new position August 1.

The student legal services center has been without a lawyer since the end of June, when the contract for Bruce Hamilton and Doug German, the former student lawyers, expired.

Rasmussen, who graduated from the University of Nebraska law school in 1972, has been working for the firm of Wagener and Youngs in Lincoln.

He noted that he left private law practice to accept the post as student lawyer because he has "always been fond of the university. I spent six and a half years here going to school."

In addition, he said he felt there was a real need for legal services for students. "I've represented students before," he said, "and I believe that students are among the groups in society who can least afford a private attorney."

"Most students I've worked with have been very alert and aware of the legal problems they're encountering."

He added, however, that even if students recognize the legal problems, "they may not know the legal ropes. It's a distinct advantage having a lawyer handy to just run in on."

When Rasmussen was in the business college at UN-L he served as a student senator in the year 1967-68. He later served as a student court justice.

He noted that "When I was here ASUN sponsored dances and social activities. The services provided by ASUN have greatly increased, they're now sponsoring worthwhile programs such as the student legal services."

While at the university, Rasmussen also served on the

Prof wins post

Dale K. Hayes, professor of educational administration at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, has been appointed to the board of directors of the Research Development Corporation of the Midwest.

The announcement was made Friday by Nebraska State Senator Eugene Mahoney of Omaha, a member of the executive council of the Midwest Council of State Governments, the parent organization for the Research Development Corporation.

The Midwest Council of State Governments is an organization which includes representatives of 12 Midwestern states who have joined together to consider legislative problems common to the region.

The Research Development Corporation is the Council's designated agency for accepting and distributing funds obtained for regional programs from federal and private sources.

University Debate Squad, Interfraternity Council, Corncobs and on the ASUN Electoral Commission.

Besides past ties with the university, Rasmussen said he remains interested in the university partly because he has family members still attending UN-L. His wife, Jeanette Harder Rasmussen, and his brother, Mark, are both seniors in business administration at UN-L. Rasmussen noted that both Jeanette and Mark served on the ASUN business advisory board.

Rasmussen mentioned that while in the position as student lawyer he hopes to write some booklets on problem areas for students. Such areas would include arrests, landlord-tenant problems, and if possible he said he would expand on areas such as wills.

In addition, he said, "I would like to make myself as available as possible for lectures and seminars to student groups such as Greek houses or dormitories."

He noted that he can also anticipate handling legal problems in these problem areas as well as in some family relations problems. "We haven't decided what to do yet when two students are involved," he added.

He said that plans beyond his year in the student legal services center are hazy.

ASUN president Ron Clingenpeel noted that Rasmussen was chosen out of 13 lawyers who submitted applications for the post. He said that the research committee examined the records of every lawyer who submitted an application. Guidelines used to select the lawyer included knowledge of divorce, civil, criminal and landlord-tenant laws.

Members of the search committee were: Jed Buechler, student; Jana Hills, ASUN senator; Steve Kay, ASUN senator; Ron Clingenpeel, ASUN president; Georgia Skinker, Home Economics professor; and Don Shaneyfelt, Associate Dean of the Law College.

This year the student legal services program is being expanded to include one full-time lawyer rather than two part-time lawyers as were hired in the past.

Prof chairs conference

Dr. Dennis R. Bormann, associate professor of speech at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, is serving as American chairman at the Fourth Biennial International Colloquium on Communication, being held in Marburg, Germany.

The conference, which is sponsored by the Speech Communication Association of America and the German Speech Society, promotes the exchange of ideas related to such areas as developments in research, intercultural communication, and history or criticism of rhetoric.

Dr. Bormann will also present a paper entitled "Modern Elements in Adam Muller's Rhetorical Theory" and, in addition, will assist with translating duties.

Other American scholars attending include representatives from North Carolina State University, University of Minnesota, Northwestern University, University of Michigan, Pennsylvania State University, Southern Oregon College, and Texas Tech University.

David Rasmussen, lawyer designate for the NU student legal services program, listens to suggestions on the program.

Norman Luboff featured in workshop

School, college and church choral directors and some graduate and undergraduate college students from throughout the nation are attending the Choral Associates Workshop at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

About 200 participants have registered for the Choral Associates sponsored event which features noted conductor Norman Luboff and international guest Eskil Hemberg, a Scandinavian composer, conductor, educator and executive.

The participants will earn two hours of graduate college credit during the workshop which is using the facilities of the NU School of Music between July 21 and 26.

Topics being covered in the workshop include rehearsal procedures for various types of music; performance and stylistic practices; special problems of church musicians; demonstrations of vocal development techniques; choral reading sessions, and seminars dealing with the preparation of the conductor - physically, psychologically and musically.

Luboff is the conductor of the touring and recording Norman Luboff Choir.

Hemberg has toured Europe and the United States with the Stockholm University Choir. He is a former producer at Swedish Radio and is a director of Rikskonserter, the government agency supporting concert performances.

Other clinicians include Walter Ehret of the Scarsdale, N.Y., public schools; Paul Salamunovich of Loyola University and Mount Saint Mary's College in Los Angeles; Frank Pooler of California State University, Long Beach; Mel Olson of the First United Church in Omaha, and Eva Mae Struckmeyer of Horace Mann Middle School in Wausau, Wis.

Oglala tribal member exhibits paintings

An exhibition of paintings and wall hangings by Arthur Amiotte of Manderson, S.D., is now on display at Sheldon Memorial Art Gallery.

Amiotte is a member of the Oglala Teton Sioux Tribe. Born on the Pine Ridge Reservation, he has received his Bachelor Degree at Northern State College, Aberdeen, S.D. Subsequently he studied at the University of Oklahoma-Norman and Pennsylvania State University.

He has exhibited widely in both North and South Dakota, Oklahoma and Iowa, but this will be his first exhibition in Nebraska. His work has also been shown at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C. and in Brooklyn and New York City. His work has received awards at the Philbrook Art Center at Tulsa and at the Indian Culture International Exhibition in Bismarck, N.D. in 1964.

He is a member of the South Dakota Committee on Humanities and the South Dakota Arts Council and is a Regent of the Institute of American Indian Arts at Santa Fe. He has taught art in Sioux City, Iowa, and Aberdeen, S.D. and is presently Education Specialist for Curriculum Development with the Bureau of Indian Affairs in Manderson.

The present exhibition is made up of recent paintings and wall hangings, all of which illustrate Mr. Amiotte's use of the colors, textures and symbols of Plains Indian culture. At the same time, his style in the matter of technique is firmly anchored in contemporary practice. The exhibition will continue through Sunday, August 11.

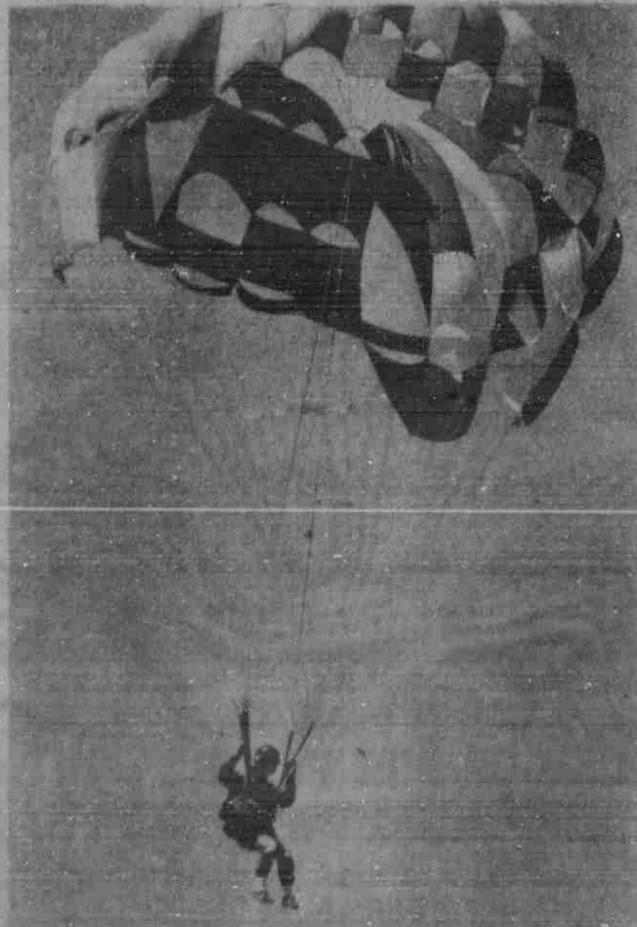

Photo by Harry Baumert.
Lynn Sühasek, a Summer Nebraskan reporter, experiments with skydiving. In the picture, fellow jumper Jim Wooden dives with an American Papillon chute. (More on pp. 4-5).