Students rough it in workshop

By Rebecca Britz

To most folks these days, "roughing it" means a weekend in the Winnebago camper with no flush toilet.

But to almost 40 students who went through workshops in The Plains Pioneer Experience this summer, roughing it meant the real thing.

For five days at the beginning of each five-week summer session in 1973 and '74, about 20 students have cooked, slept, worked and played—in and around a complex of log cabins on the grounds of the Stuhr Museum of the Prairie Pioneer at Grand Island, Nebr.

The class, which is to be nominated for the 1974 National Association of Summer Sessions Award for Innovative and Creative Summer Sessions Offerings, was created by UN-L Centennial Fellow Roger Welsch.

In an interview last week, Welsch said the purpose of the course, which gives six hours of credit in English or Elementary Education, is to put folklore and literature into the perspective of the 19th century pioneer experience.

"How can you really study Mari Sandoz' Old Jules or Cather's O Pioneers! in an air conditioned classroom, meeting twice a week?" Welsch asked.

"We're not trying to duplicate pioneer life (at the workshops), but we do try to get into the environment of regional literature, singing the songs the pioneers sang, eating the food they ate and doing the work they did."

The work part of the course, in addition to the five day living situation, includes writing a substantial paper on some aspect of folklore or regional literature, Welsch added.

Recounting some of the experiences students had at the workshop this summer, Welsch remembered one night when "we were driven out of the fields by a thunderstorm," and one afternoon's half-mile walk from the cabins to Stuhr's railroad village in 107 degree weather.

High temperatures this summer created several problems for the students, not the least of which was the closing of the Hall County campgrounds because of fire hazards—the workshops had been using the camp's bathrooms.

"We had to wade the Wood River and use the woods on the other side," Welsch recalled.

Cooking on an old iron stove in a closed cabin was "a great learning experience," according to Gina Newbold, a senior in English and psychology.

"We had to keep the doors shut even on the hottest days so the wind wouldn't cool the stovetop," she said.

But, Welsch said, "the food was great."

"Real pioneer fare—beans and sowbelly and sonuvabitch stew. What? Oh, that's all the leftovers cooked up in one big pot."

A Winnebago would have been a luxury.

High school cagers' battle to be aired

For the fifth time on statewide television, Nebraskans will be able to see the top 24 high school basketball players in the state compete in the Sixth Annual Nebraska State High School All-Star Basketball Game. The Nebraska ETV Network will broadcast complete game coverage, Saturday, August 17, at 7:30 p.m.

Sponsored by the Nebraska Coaches Association, the game takes place Friday, August 16 at Pershing Auditorium in Lincoln. Ken Johnson, NETN PRODUCER, Doug Brooker, NETN director, and a University of Nebraska mobile television crew will videotape the game for the delayed Saturday broadcast.

The North team will be coached by Al Bahe, Fremont High coach, assisted by Jay Muma of Schuyler. The South team is coached by Wally McNaught, Lincoln Southeast, and the assistant coach is Jim Martin, Omaha Central.

The annual event drew over 5,300 basketball fans last year. A record 6,000 seats are available this year, according to Rick Alloway, of the coaches association information staff.
