Fees???

Students will pay an additional $10 a semester in student fees.

But they will have more say in where their up to $61.50 in fees goes.

Both are the result of the first UNL Fee Allocations Board, according to board chairman Dave Morrison.

Both are the result of the first U

The board made fee recommendations to the NU Board of Regents at the Regents' July meeting.

Included were cost-of-living increases for most University programs, financed by a $10 fee increase—$7.39 recommended by the board and $2.61 by UNL Chancellor James Zumberge.

Similar boards were established for the University of Nebraska at Omaha and the University of Nebraska Medical Center campuses as directed by the regents in the fall of 1973. The regents also renamed the fees "University Program and Facilities Fees" at that time.

The UNL board was appointed September 1973. Of 12 members, eight are students; two, faculty; and two, UNL administrative staff.

Morrison, then a senior in pre-law, said the board's hardest task was divvying $185,839 [after the $10 increase] among programs that requested $304,000.

He said the board's existence opens the fee-distribution process. Board members had three public hearings on fee allocations and two on the proposed fee increase.

Almost the only attendants were members of the 42 groups requesting have one to three credit hour $47 for four to six hours; and $61.50 for seven or more credit hours. Last year the fees were $15, $37, and $51.50.

UNL Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs Ken Bader said he likes the zero-based budget which came with the fee allocations board.

It means programs and organizations begin each academic year with only the money allocated to it by the fee board.

That forces students to keep better track of organizations so they may decide how much money to give it the next year, Bader said.

Yearly reviews are especially important in University programs, he said, whose officers change each year, potentially changing the organizations with them.

The regents set up the fee board, he said, at a time when fees were the object of a student law suit.

Under regent guidelines, campus chancellors put University programs in two categories: A, student activities; and B, longterm debts, staff and maintenance responsibilities.

Zumberge subdivided the first category into two groups: A1, activities planned and managed by student groups; A2, acti-
