Oregon stats aren't all 'roses'

By Steve Taylor

Looking at the statistic sheet, one might think the Oregon Ducks were a big success in 1973; maybe even a Rose Bowl contender.

The Ducks had four All-West Coast performers, outgained its opponents during the season and ranked second in overall defense in the Pacific 8 conference.

However, those highlights of the season pale considerably when you keep in mind the Ducks won only two of 11 games in 1973.

From that mystery team of last season, Oregon returns 29 lettermen. Included in that group are six offensive starters and eight defensive regulars.

Not returning from that mystery team is last year's head coach Dick Enright, as soft-spoken Don Head takes over the job of trying to keep the Ducks afloat. Prior to his appointment he was an assistant at Oregon in charge of quarterbacks and receivers.

Read's knowledge of offensive football is recognized around the country. He has written numerous articles in coaching journals and published one book, The Complete Football Passing Game. Two other books are almost ready for publication.

The keys in helping Read to practice what he preaches will be a running back, a middle linebacker and a free safety. Don Reynolds, Reggie Lewis and Steve Donnelly all received all-star acclaim during last year's disappointing season.

Reynolds, a 5 ft. 8 in. 181 lb. senior became only the second player in Oregon history to rush for over 1000 yards. His coach said his is one of the top three runners in the nation.

Reggie Lewis was sensational each of the past two seasons as a defensive tackle but this season will try his hand at playing nose guard. Extremely quick, Lewis racked up 98 tackles last year.

Steve Donnelly was a third team All-American last year at the free safety position. He picked off five interceptions and had a 78-yard return against Washington.

After the spring sessions the Ducks appeared solid at the quarterback position with Herb Singleton. However Singleton broke his wrist during a summer job and has been counted out for the first part of the season.

Taking the quarterback reins will be senior Norval Turner. Turner should adapt well to the Ducks' new Veer offense since he is a much better runner than passer.

Defensively, Oregon had the best defense against the run last year in the Pac-8 conference. With 8 returning starters from that unit, run-oriented opponents might find the going tough. Passers won't be in for a picnic either. Speed, depth and experience add up to one of the better secondaries in the country.

Weaknesses? It might be in the offensive line where only two starters return. If this inexperienced group can't open up a few holes, Reynolds and backfield mate, Rick Kane, will be running into defensive linemen and not endzones.

Saturday's clash will mark the fourth time Oregon and Nebraska have met on the gridiron. The Huskers have won two of the three previous contests, including a 34-7 pounding in 1971.

'Yell Like Hell' for keg

It's a fall afternoon in Nebraskaland and Big Red fans have taken to the field. The streets are deserted. Seventy-five thousand people huddle in Memorial Stadium and other Nebraskans are glued to their television or radio.

"There is no lack of spirit here at UNL, we'd just like to see more of it," said James Eiberger, president of Corn Cobs, one of the campus spirit organizations.

"Yell Like Hell," the first pep rally of the year, marks a concerted effort by Corn Cobs, Tassels and the UNL Marching Band to improve campus spirit, spirit group leaders said.

The rally will begin on the south steps of the Nebraska Union at 6 p.m. Friday. It will include a march to Memorial Stadium where the crowd will be addressed by Coach Tom Osborne and the co-captains of the football team, Tom Ruud and Dave Humm.

An added feature will be the "Yell Like Hell contest," open to any "fraternity, sorority, living unit or group of thirsty souls with the best cheer or yell.

Carolyn Grice, Tassel president reported that letters about the rally were sent out to the 15 area radio stations and the four television stations. Bands will be touring the cafeterias on Thursday to rouse spirit, Eiberger said.

The three organizations formed a committee of representatives last spring in an effort to bolster the communications between the groups, Grice said.

The most important achievement of the committee had been to move the band closer to the card section in the stadium, said Steffens.
