D'Amboise to dance

Jacques D'Amboise is "the best male dancer produced in America," according to Donal Henahan of the Chicago Daily News.

D'Amboise began dancing because his family could not afford a baby sitter and he was forced to go along with his mother and sister to his sister's dance lessons. At the encouragement of the instructor, he joined in on the class and thus began his life-long career. At age 11 he made his first appearance on stage in New York with The Ballet Society and since 1953 he has been a principal dancer with the New York City Ballet.

Along with his successful career as a ballet dancer he has also danced principal roles on the Broadway stage, been active as a choreographer, made a lecture film entitled "Watching Ballet" and has been innovative in the instruction of young dancers.

Tonight he and his five member company will present several selections of his own and George Balanchine's choreography.

Among the selections are "The Nutcracker Suite," music by Tchaikovsky, "Apollo," music by Igor Stravinsky, "Meditation," music by Jules Massenet and "Who Cares," music by George Gershwin.

This program is part of the UNL Performing Arts Series sponsored by the Cultural Affairs Committee. The performance, which begins at 8 p.m. in Kimball Recital Hall, is sold out.
