HENRY'S 1123 'R'

Trainers ...

Both Sullivan and Schneider came to Nebraska full-time 21 years ago. Sullivan said he felt the biggest change in physical therapy since he's been here has been the acceptance of it by the coaches.

"In the old days, the coaches almost prescribed it themselves," he said.

Sullivan said Jerry Tagge's recovery before the 1971 game against the University of Southern California was the most fantastic he has seen while at Nebraska. Tagge was able to start after severely bruising his thigh the Tuesday before the game. He was hospitalized and in continuous care until the team left for California.

Sullivan credited immediate and constant treatment for recoveries such as that and Dave Humm's hip pointer, which he suffered against Wisconsin. Humm should be recovered completely for this week's game, Sullivan said.

Humm's injury was to the "top edge of the big, wide pelvic bone where all the abdominal muscles are connected."

I-back John O'Leary may join Humm in seeing action before expected. A new brace that dentists have developed could prove successful in protecting O'Leary's broken jaw, Sullivan said.

Facing the Minnesota game, the injury situation has "looked as good, if not better, than at any time since the first game," according to Sullivan. Monster back Terry Rogers will be the only one seeing no action. He received a strained knee last week.
