

Law students win competition

By Lori Clepper

"All I want out of life is to be able to buy someone lunch and not have to look at the check," said Kelley Baker, chairman of the UNL Publications Board and senior law student.

Baker has, for the last two years, won the UNL Moot Court Competition for writing the best law briefs. Out of 70 teams of junior UNL law students competing last year, eight were chosen to compete as seniors. Baker and his partner David Buntain won that contest.

"The thing is," Baker said, "no one else wants to go to all that trouble and work. So, we won."

Baker contends that he drives Buntain crazy because he writes his prize-winning law briefs the night before the competition.

"Kelley and I have different ideas on work," Buntain said. "But he's got a hell of a lot of talent, and I respect that talent."

"When Buntain and I entered (the UNL Moot Court Competition) in our junior year, we figured we'd have no chance," Baker said. "We didn't hear anything for months, so it became a running joke to ask when we were going to get our award. Finally, we asked one professor who didn't know it was a joke, and he gave us our awards."

Future undecided

Baker will be graduated in May but he said he has no plans for when he gets out: "I kind of like the idea of being a trial lawyer and appealing to a jury with one of those 'this poor woman...'

stories, but I don't really know. Besides, why should I get a job? What do I need money for? I figured as long as I'm warm and well-fed, I'm okay. Of course I would like a new color TV and a tape deck... Maybe I should get a job."

Baker is a law clerk at the Nebraska State School Boards Assoc., where he works at least 20 hours a week.

"It looks like I do a lot," he said. "But I see myself rather like a rutabaga—I'm vegetating."

The spare time that Baker does have, he wastes, he said.

"I do go to the YMCA every now and then. You see, doctors take Wednesdays and play golf. Law students go play racquet ball and handball."

Regional competition

As an undergraduate, Baker was a member of the ASUN Senate, the Cornhusker (UNL's former yearbook) and the Arts and Sciences Advisory Board. Last year, he served on the Fee Allocations Board, which determines how student fees are spent.

"I don't do that much of interest—I sleep, I eat, occasionally I go to classes. I sell programs at the games and was in the Army. I guess I'm just a veteran waiting for benefits to go up."

Baker and Buntain will compete in the regional moot court competition in November in Omaha. If they win, the team will go on to the national competition in New York City, held in December.

If that happens, "I might just have to start working a little," Baker said.
