

UNL FACULTY

The following is a list of salaries for UNL professors, associate professors, assistant professors and instructors as given in the University of Nebraska's 1974-75 Operating Budget, a booklet available at Love Library.

The list does not include administrators, deans, NU Extension Division faculty or those faculty members not appointed before the budget's publication last spring. Included on the list are some faculty members who left the University since the budget's publication.

The salaries represent nine-month figures and do not include summer school session salaries. Those working part-time are indicated by the letter "P".

Key: 1—professor; 2—associate professor; 3—assistant professor; 4—instructor. C—chairman, V—vice chairman, D—director.

Since last semester, members of the Faculty Senate have complained that large differences in faculty salaries exist among the various UNL departments.

For example, while the average salary of a full professor in the College of Arts and Sciences is $16,260, a full professor in the College of Business Administration receives an average salary of $17,340. This is just one of several salary discrepancies, according to a Faculty Senate committee report issued in September.

The facts speak for themselves. Today's Daily Nebraskan further details these disparities and points out the need for a standard salary policy for the total University system.

The Faculty Senate committee has proposed a step system where salaries would be determined by a teacher's merit and service, not by such things as the amount of political clout a department chairman has.

We urge that a standard salary policy be enforced immediately. A system where an instructor in one department earns more than an associate professor in another department is grossly unjust.
