Warner Leinfellner of the UNL Department of Philosophy will speak on "Philosophical Foundations of Chemistry" today at 3:30 p.m. in Hamilton 110. Refreshments will be served at 3 p.m. in Hamilton 801, and students, faculty, and guests are welcome.

"Kung Fu", a Chinese movie sponsored by the Chinese Student Assoc., will be presented in the Nebraska Union small auditorium Saturday at 8 p.m. The film is open to the public and admission is 25 cents for members and one dollar for nonmembers.

"Kwaiden", a Japanese Horror/Fantasy Film, will be screened today and Saturday at 3, 7, and 9 p.m. at Sheldon Art Gallery.

Block and Bridle will present "Little Ak-Sar-Ben", a livestock showmanship contest for UNL students, at 7 p.m. today at the judging pavilion of the horse barn on East Campus.

The Lincoln and UNL Gay Action Group is sponsoring a special Halloween Costume Coffeehouse Sunday from 9 to 12 p.m. at 333 No. 14th St. Everyone is urged to wear a costume and admission is one dollar.

Witches and ghosts take over the Mueller Planetarium for five days, beginning Sunday. The night sky has provided mankind with many legends and thoughts of mysterious creatures. This half-hour planetarium program gives the audience a chance to laugh at these "monsters" and ends with a fierce rainstorm. The program will be presented at 2, 2:40, 3:20 and 4 p.m. Sunday and at 3:45 p.m. next Monday through Thursday.

Lack of money impedes committee plans

Ely Meyerson, UNL dean of administration and an adviser to FAB last spring, said his information was that the appeals decision was made, but it may not have been adequately communicated to the Student Bar Association.

Meyerson said the SBA request for funds was made on March 11 and the FAB notified student groups of its decisions in an April 10 letter.

Glaser said that since "it looks like we're too late for an appeal," the committee will try to receive funding from a $15,000 FAB fund intended for new student programs this fall or, possibly, for those rejected last spring.

"We will have to start from the ground up since we'd have to present our case all over and receive (FAB) approval, which was denied us previously," Glaser said. "Sometimes you wonder if it's worth it."

"We're concerned that this never happen again," he said. "Not just for ourselves, but for everybody else."

Glaser said the Minority Recruitment Committee was formed last year to provide registration and background information on the UNL Law School to minority students at state colleges, graduate schools and a few Nebraska high schools.

He said the committee received $500 from ASUN last fall.

The Affirmative Action Reverse Discrimination minority symposium was allotted $100, and the remainder went toward minority recruitment.

Glaser said the remainder of the funding last year came from the American Bar Association as $500 in matching funds. He said the ABA has indicated there will be no matching funds available this year.

The committee also visits with minority groups on the UNL campus and visits other Nebraska colleges. Glaser said the SBA group visited Chadron State College, Scottsbluff Junior College and several Omaha high schools last year.

The committee is planning to mail 500 information packets to students, despite the shortage of funds, according to Glaser.

The group's plans to visit Washburn University in Topeka, Kan., may be cancelled because of a lack of money, Glaser said. The committee has $70 now in its treasury and has received a $100 loan from the SBA that may help make the Washburn trip possible, he said.

Glaser said the committee's plans are uncertain.

"We are just kind of stranded here in Lincoln without funds now. Unless we get money from someplace, we won't be doing much this year."

The committee was formed in 1972 by UNL law professors John Snowden, Dave Ludke and Al Frank, who mailed information packets at their own expense to minority students.

SBA president Waid first involved law students in the program last year. Six law college students and two law professors are now members of the committee.
