Teaching minorities
Specialized education

Secondary education majors may now specialize in a new area—teaching minority children. Ward Sybouts, chairman of the Secondary Education Dept., said he thinks most students majoring in the field don't have the background to deal with minority children. "We think there are needs in rural and urban settings to work with these kind of people," he said. According to Sybouts, under the new specialization, freshmen in "minority group education" through the Departments of History and Philosophy of Education. As sophomores and juniors, practical experience is gained in prestudent teaching practicum. Students are placed in a minority community setting to learn and also to make contributions to the community, he said. As seniors, the student teaching experience is also in a minority setting, Sybouts said. Secondary education majors are students who want to teach junior and senior high school students. They specialize in areas such as art, music, science, industrial education, English or social studies, he said. Sybouts said students in the program are also encouraged to take classes in the College of Arts and Sciences that focus on different aspects in minority education.

RACETIME

 60 YEARS AGO

Oct. 30, 1914—"In conversation with Dean Engberg, one of the reporters learned that the University authorities must make it understood that the Olympic games were to take the place of a free-for-all scrap. The student body has made an agreement with the faculty to expend their energies on that occasion. The breaking of this agreement by the Sophomores and Freshmen should not occur again, as it gives a bad name to the University in general. It is to be hoped that this matter will not come up again, say the authorities."

"The Seniors claim that the social season at the University of Nebraska will be formally opened at their hop Friday night, November 6. To add to the many other alluring features of a Senior Hop, this year's event will be in Rosewilde Party House. This new ball room has just recently been finished and has already become very popular among the dancing fans. The music will be furnished by Scott's orchestra which adds the last circumstance to make the whole an unqualified success.

"Regular nightly rehearsals are being held in the different fraternities' houses, acquiring grace and perfection in the latest dancing steps, the Maxixe, Fox Trot and all their fancy rivals. The first daring appearance of these latest additions are expected at the Senior Hop."
