American Enterprise gives its opinion of Army ROTC graduates

"Military experience as an officer is a significant asset. The opportunity that an ROTC graduate receives for leadership and responsibility cannot often be duplicated as early in an industrial career."

Indian graduate study offered

Graduate professional students from throughout the United States have an opportunity to spend the 1975-76 school year in work-study assignments in India in a program coordinated by the University of California at Berkeley.

They will be based at universities and institutes in New Delhi, and will be involved with field work.

Participants in the program since it was started seven years ago have operated an optometry clinic, worked in a school for disturbed children, prepared an environmental impact study for a new urban development, and researched urban squatters, transportation systems, and legal aid for the poor, among other assignments.

The students are selected from graduate schools such as agriculture, business, environmental design, criminology, engineering, journalism, librarianship, public health, social welfare, public policy, and systems analysis.

Total per-student cost for nine months in India is estimated at $2,300, or slightly less for Berkeley students. Financial aid may be available through a student's home institution.

January 15, 1975 is the deadline to apply to the Office of International Education, University of California, 2537 Haste Street, Berkeley, California, 94720.
