Service provides library help

UNL libraries are conducting a three-day Extra Service Program (ESP) to familiarize students with the libraries and help them locate information for papers, classes or projects, according to Marlene Heroux, ESP coordinator.

The program, organized by the Library Instruction Committee, began Sunday and will continue today and Tuesday from 1 to 10 p.m.

The committee also planned the freshman English class tours of Love Library this fall and designed the library instruction guides and handbook, Heroux said.

The Love, Undergraduate, Law and C.Y. Thompson Libraries will have volunteers on hand to help with the ESP, according to Kathy Johnson, chairman of the committee.

The short-term goal of the ESP is to help students with immediate needs, such as term papers, she said. The long-term goal is to help them understand the libraries so they will feel confident when using them again, she said.

During the three days, about 35 volunteers from Love will be stationed throughout the library to answer questions or help with problems, Heroux said. The other libraries also will have volunteers on hand to answer questions, she said.

"In addition to helping students through ESP, a dial-a-librarian service is available year round," Johnson said. This service is used primarily by students with complicated or long-range projects, she said.

But anyone may call and make an appointment for help in finding materials, she said. They try to match the student with a librarian who is familiar with his subject, Johnson said.

If the ESP is successful this semester, it will be available again next year, Heroux said.

The Monday, Nov. 4, issue of the Daily Nebraskan erroneously stated that the Star Trek fan club, Star Base Andromeda, was created solely by Richard Heim.
According to Heim, Star Base Andromeda was created by four people after he left Star Trek Fan Club Lemnicus because "particular members did not like the way I, then as President, was running the meetings."
