"There have been no complaints concerning this show, and that is almost unheard of in TV," said Otto. He added that the programs have received many compliments.

After their television runs, the programs are available at no cost to schools, civic groups and other organizations for nonprofit showings through Van Sant Dugdale, he said.

Otto estimated the cost of the series to USFG, from filming to airing, runs just under one million dollars a year.

According to Otto, USFG is interested in the series "because it reflects the highest ideals of America."

Marshall was selected from a list of 100 stars to narrate the American Life Style Series because of his credibility, stature, availability and affordability, Otto said.

Marshall said he believes in the series and is proud of being associated with it.

Best known for his starring roles in "The Defenders" and "The Bold Ones," Marshall is currently the host of the CBS Radio Mystery program.

Bryan, a former Nebraska congressman and one-time secretary of state, was a three time candidate for the presidency. He failed each time. According to a plaque in front of Fairview, Bryan was "universally known as the great commoner." He was also prosecuting attorney in the 1925 "Monkey Trial," in which John Scopes was convicted of teaching evolution in a Tennessee school.

Correction...

One member of the program on the world food crisis Tuesday night was inadvertently left out of the story in Wednesday's Daily Nebraskan. Marian Staples was also on the panel. She represented CROP, a branch of the Church World Services which provides 30 overseas countries with food and clothing.
