

Brantz courting for queenship

UNL's disqualified homecoming queen contest winner, Gary Brantz, may reign yet.

Doug Voegler, a UNL law student and ASUN senator, is petitioning the ASUN Student Court for a declaratory judgment on the case "to reach the fundamental depths of the whole issue."

Voegler's five-page document requests a judgment on two points: whether ASUN may support an election which limits eligibility for candidacy on the basis of sex, and whether the ASUN electoral commission may "delegate certain of its constitutionally-mandated functions to a campus organization."

Brantz, a write-in candidate, received the most votes but was disqualified by Tassels, a campus spirit organization, for alleged campaign violations.

Brantz allegedly escorted voters to the polls and told them to vote for him, according to the Tassels. Chris Evans, the second highest votegetter, was crowned queen.

Statute cited

"One of the fundamental principles of law is that a person shall not be discriminated against solely because of his or her sex," Voegler's petition states, citing Nebraska Revised Statute 85-116, which governs the university.

The second point of Voegler's petition contends that the power to disqualify a candidate belongs to the ASUN electoral commission and cannot be delegated to a campus organization, such as Tassels.

Brantz and his campaign manager, Dennis Onnen, also have filed a petition in the court.

His petition states: "Brantz pointed out the location of the polls only to those who asked him to do so, and the only person he escorted to the polls was Nancy Stohs, another candidate. They went together to the polls to determine if candidates were allowed to vote. At no time did Brantz tell a voter to vote for him."

Defendants

Jim Eiberger, Corncobs president, and Carolyn Grice, Tassels president, are named as defendants in the petition which alleges they disqualified Brantz without granting him due process.

The ASUN Student Court will hold a hearing on both petitions Wednesday at 6:30 p.m. in the Nebraska Union, according to Don Armbrust, the court's chief justice. The hearing will be open to the public.

Voegler said his main reason for filing the petition was to eliminate "de facto sexual discrimination." He said he hoped his action would also encourage students to use the student court. This is the court's first case this year.

The ASUN Student Court will hold a hearing on both petitions Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. in the Nebraska Union, according to Don Armbrust, the court's chief justice. The hearing will be open to the public.

Women back to school

Workshop offered

Have you wondered how that older woman in one of your classes feels among all those younger people?

The University of Nebraska Alumni Association is sponsoring a free Back-to-School Workshop for women who are returning to school, said Carole Reno, director of University of Nebraska Alumni Services. The workshop will be held Wednesday, Nov. 20 from 7-10 p.m. in the Nebraska Union.

Reno, who is program coordinator of the workshop, said its main purpose is "to provide an opportunity for women to meet other women who are going back to school so they will see some familiar faces on campus once they start attending."

Administrative and academic advisers will be available to the women to give advice on scheduling classes, registering, finding an adviser, competing, parking, coping and planning a degree program, which Reno describes as particularly important.

Also included in the workshop will be small group discussions and a talk entitled, "Understanding Universities: Short Cuts and Sneak Attacks" by Schuyler Houser, a Fellow in the Centennial Educational Program, Reno said.

In addition to advice, women who attend the workshop will receive packets containing materials that may be of help to them, Reno said. These packets will include a general information catalog, a campus map, the names and telephone numbers of resource people and of other women going back to school and an action-sequence chart showing the step-by-step process of entering college.

The Canon F-1. Images are what it's all about.

Photographic equipment can be a trap. Sometimes, you can get so involved with it that you lose sight of your real purpose—making photographs.

The Canon F-1 can help you forget about equipment and concentrate on images. It was designed, and functions, as an extension of your photographic vision. It's responsive in a way that you must experience to appreciate.

And since it was conceived as a system camera, every part works together with effortless smoothness, from the more than 40 Canon FD and FL lenses to the over 200 accessories.

The heart of the camera is its central spot metering system. With it you can use anyone's exposure system, no matter how critical, since it only measures the central 12% of the finder area—regardless of the focal length used.

So if you're spending too much time lately worrying about your equipment, it's time you stopped, and took a good look at the Canon F-1 system, and Canon's other fine cameras—the automatic, electronic EF, the full-feature FTb, and the TLb. If you're interested in images, Canon's your camera.
