Sugar shortage hits cafeterias

By Lori Clepper

Life around the residence hall cafeterias isn't as sweet as it used to be.

Over the past few months the price of sugar has risen 350 to 400 per cent, according to Douglas Rix, assistant director of housing food service. Consequently, the packages of sugar which used to be on cafeteria tables have disappeared. Sugar now is available only in the cafeteria line itself.

"We found that when the packets were on the tables, students would fill their pockets and take it back to their rooms to use later," Rix said. "By placing them in a more open area, we hope students will not find it so easy to do that."

According to Carl Hutchinson, assistant manager of the food stores at UNL, the cost of sugar has risen from $14 to $64 for 100 pounds since the beginning of the school year. Since Tuesday, it has gone up 17, according to a distributor Hutchinson talked to.

Neither Hutchinson nor Rix know why the cost of sugar has gone up so rapidly.

"I honestly don't know what's causing it," Rix said. "But I really feel that there should be some regulation on it."

"Of course it's hard to eliminate sugar completely from the residence hall food," Rix said. "Our first responsibility is to see that the student is looked after. But we are doing little things like putting out less pie and other high-sugar desserts."

"I would also like to use bulk sugar," Rix said. "I defy any student to walk off with a handful of sugar."
