RACTIME 60 YEARS AGO

December 9, 1914—Some expert lady crook, or crooks, are doing a rushing business in the girl's gymnasium. Every year a few light fingered individuals invade the girl's dressing room and ply their art, but this year's crew make all former artists seem crude. In former years a person could lay a muff on the table and feel confident that while present in the flesh it would remain there. Not so now, however, Muffs, handkerchiefs and even petticoats take mysterious flights the instant after the owner's back is turned, while pocket books must be concealed as carefully as if on the "Bowery."

The authorities are striving to find the guilty parties and are closely shadowing two or three suspects. In a short time they will no doubt land the kleptomaniacs and extricate them from college. Meanwhile all girls are urged to keep their valuables and necessary clothing locked up. To any of the "Kleptos" who may read this, we give warning. You haven't been caught yet but "there's a first time for everything."

Queen may be disposed

The long-held UNL tradition of having a homecoming queen may soon be deposed, or even disposed of—for good.

According to an article in The Omaha World-Herald yesterday, students at UNL may have elected the school's last homecoming queen.

In the article, Ken Bader, vice-chancellor of academic affairs questioned whether UNL students feel the election of a homecoming queen is worthwhile. "I just don't think that the idea of a queen appeals to the student body as a whole," he said.

Much of the controversy surrounding the homecoming queen began when Gary Brantz, a junior from Council Bluffs, was elected. Brantz received the most votes in the election, but was disqualified because of alleged "campaign irregularities." After appealing to the Student Court, where he was confirmed as homecoming queen, he immediately returned the title to the reigning queen, Chris Evans.

Ron Clingenpeel, ASUN president also spoke in favor of discontinuing the contest or updating the rules.

Support of the contest has been withdrawn by Tassels, a sponsoring organization. According to Carolyn Grice, Tassels' president, the contest is too expensive for Tassels to sponsor.

Several proposals, such as a homecoming tie-in with Master's Week, are being considered. ASUN will make the final decision after considering student opinions.
