

Fifty SA's needed

The process for selecting UNL residence hall student assistants (SA's) for next fall will begin the second week following semester break, Marie Hansen, coordinator of residence halls programs said Tuesday.

About 50 positions, almost one half of the student assistant staff, will need to be filled, Hansen said. Last year 300 applications were received for about 50 positions, she said.

To be eligible for the position, candidates must have a 2.5 grade point average, and be a junior or senior with an average class load, not more than 16 hours, during the 1975-76 year.

Screen applicants

Hansen said that in previous years almost all the applicants were interviewed, while this year the applicants' folders will be screened first, and candidates for interviews will be selected.

Complex directors read the applications, decide which students they're interested in and interview them.

Hansen said that all final appointments should be completed by March 21, the beginning of spring break.

Students receiving positions will be required to attend spring training seminars, and an intensive training session in the fall beginning one week before residence halls are opened. Individual residence halls also hold training workshops during the year to train SA's to handle situations which arise at special times.

Different qualities

Nancy Vineyard, SA for ninth floor Smith, said some of the things the interviewers look for are qualities and interests of the applicant. She said each of the halls look for different qualities, because over the years each residence hall has attracted a certain kind of student.

Helping students to get the most out of their academic year, is one of Vineyard's goal as an SA. She said the difference between a good and poor SA is that a good SA will look at each situation, see the differences between it and others and react maturely to it, while a poor SA may not be flexible enough within the system.

"Personal discretion is the key work," Vineyard said. Each SA responds differently in situations, and their personal qualities are contributing factors to their decisions.

Full-time responsibility

John Schmidt, SA from fourth floor Harper, said it's a job that requires responsibility all the time. He said SA's must be able to surrender their time to help floor residents at any time.

Both Schmidt and Vineyard said they enjoy the job and consider it a real experience, and are planning to return next year.

Hansen said persons interested in applying should look for notices to appear the first week of classes second semester listing the dates and times of the three programs.
