The Bust:

A simulated arrest for theft

Call it what you will — the clink, the tank, the slammer — it's still jail. And that's a four-letter word that spells depression, failure and fear.

Jail is a temporary ending point in a chain of events, following a person's arrest for theft. What happens from the time he is picked up to the time he is locked up?

Last Friday, University Police and the Lincoln Police Department gave a Daily Nebraskan photographer, reporter and entertainment writer a step-by-step journey through a simulated arrest.
