

to the editor

Dear editor:

I would like to comment on Larry Stunkel's futile attempt to reevaluate the State High School Basketball Tournament.

In Louisville's first tournament game, they were challenged by Wood River. In my opinion, Louisville played one of their worst games of the season. But they showed their championship qualities and won over Wood River, 41-40. Louisville proved their power when they took leads of 15 points, and 19 points on Friend and Grant, respectively. Though both Friend and Grant managed to close the gap, Louisville refused to give in to these attempts. Thus they proved that they are rightfully the Class C champions.

Primary purpose

Dear editor:

After reading Ron Wylie's article of March 14 ("Middle of the Road" KRNU Frustrating to DJ"), we would like to attempt to present a more complete view. To understand the station's programming policy, we must examine KRNU's primary purpose—to educate the student in the broadcasting program. A broadcaster may eventually find himself employed at any sort of station, from a "big rocker" to classical, and the exposure to diverse types of music might prove invaluable.

The frequently scheduled public service announcements which Wylie mentioned also serve a very important educational function, because they simulate the advertisements he would encounter in a commercial station. The student must read some live and play some from pre-recorded tape cartridges. He mentioned that the PSA subject range seemed to exclude such organizations as the Peace Action Coalition, but we need to point out that KRNU can only use PSA material that is made available. (If we don't have it, we can't play it!) It should also be noted that we use materials sent to us by Amnesty International.

KRNU offers many programs exclusive to the Lincoln area, taken from four nationwide networks and broadcasting students. Freshman as well as varsity football and basketball games and NU baseball contests are aired.

We recognize that the station is not meant to be like any other station, but that it does serve educational, entertainment and informative purposes.
