

Theater designs displayed

Sixteen UNL senior architecture students are working on a class project to design plans for a Howell Theatre replacement. The designs will be displayed Thursday at the Sheldon Art Gallery Auditorium from 2 to 5 p.m.

Students are designing a theater-auditorium complex which would be located on the present Howell Theatre site, according to Bill Hidell, course instructor.

Hidell said the designs call for a small theater, which would hold about 250 to 400 people. The theater would house the drama department and be used for teaching, he said.

The auditorium would hold 2,500 to 3,000 people, and would be used for the Lincoln Symphony and other civic center events. It would not be used for university-related activities, he said.

Hidell said it is unlikely the designs ever would be used for the actual plan.

One of a limited edition of numbered medals produced to commemorate the 200th anniversary of the American Revolution, shown above, has been donated by the Nebraska American Revolution Bicentennial Commission as a special auction item for "Auction '75." The auction, sponsored by Nebraskans for Public Television, begins today and will run through Sunday on the Nebraska Educational Television Network.
