

Lincoln to host hunger assembly

The Great Plains Assembly on World Population Growth and Hunger, one of six national assemblies, will be held June 26-28 at the Nebraska Center for Continuing Education on East Campus.

The assembly will draw resource people from across the Midwest, ranging from state FFA (Future Farmers of America) leaders to lawyers, nutritionists, and clergy.

Sixty to 65 participants are expected at the conference, which is sponsored by the American Assembly and the National Commission for the Observance of World Population Year. Four discussion groups will be formed on Thursday to discuss the problems and alternatives of the world food problem.

The moral issue of giving aid to countries that do not control their population growth will be one of the questions discussed. Ways to slow population growth and increase the food supply in the world also will be examined.

Clifford M. Hardin, former UNL chancellor and chairman of the national commission, will speak Friday night, June 27.
