Keyboard recital featured Sunday

An All-State Organ Recital at 3 p.m. Sunday, June 22, in Kimball Recital Hall will be a program of instruction as well as entertainment according to one of the performers.

Quentin J. Faulkner, UN-L assistant professor of organ and music theory, said he and George H. Ritchie, associate professor of organ and theory, will present commentaries on the compositions they will play.

Faulkner will begin the program by playing the romantic French organ composition, "Final," from Symphony No. 1 by Louis Vierne. The fast, lively piece was written during the late 19th century when composers were using symphonic techniques for writing organ music, Faulkner said.

He will also play an early 18th century composition, "Partita on 'Sei Gegruesset'," by J.S. Bach. The composition includes "every imaginable variation of the hymn tune," 12 in all, and "really show the colors of the organ," according to Faulkner.

Ritchie will round out the recital by playing a contemporary piece, William Bolcom's "Black Host." Bolcom, who teaches at the University of Michigan, gave a concert at UN-L last fall. Bob Snider, a NU student, will assist Ritchie on percussion.

The recital is free and open to the public.

Adult students workshop offered

A Back-To-School Workshop, designed to help adults explore opportunities for continuing their education, is scheduled for Saturday June 21, at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. Co-sponsored by the UN-L Alumni Association and the Extension Division, the Workshop will be held in the Nebraska Union Ballroom, from 8:30 a.m. until noon.

Advisors from the UN-L Colleges; Admissions Office, Registrar's Office and Financial Aids will be on hand to answer questions and assist workshop participants with educational program planning and University registration. Adults who have returned to school after a "time out" will also share their experiences.

The Workshop is free of charge and open to anyone who is considering enrolling at the University, regardless of previous college attendance.

Reservations may be made by contacting Carole Reno at the Nebraska Alumni Association, 3835 Holdrege, 402-472-2841.

Professor named to wage board

Robert F. Allen, associate professor of economics at UN-L has been named to the President's Council on Wage and Price Stability.

Allen, who has taught at UN-L since 1968, began work June 9 in Washington, D.C., and will continue with the Council until June 20, 1976.

He will be independently planning and organizing most phases of the Council's monitoring responsibilities, which include reviewing industrial activities that contribute to inflation or unnecessarily limit competition.

His wife, Merna, and sons, Michael, Edward and Jeffrey, also will spend the year in the nation's capital.

Allen received his bachelors degree from Creighton University in 1962, his masters from the University of Missouri in 1963 and his doctorate from Michigan State University in 1969.

He plans to return to UN-L at the end of his term on the Council.

Physics teaching grant given

A $54,120 grant to the University of Nebraska-Lincoln for a workshop to develop a personalized system of instruction in calculus-based physics has been announced by the National Science Foundation (NSF).

The director of the workshop project will be Robert G. Fuller, UN-L associate professor of physics.

Fuller said the workshop will be held in Boulder, Colo., in late June. It will bring together 15 outstanding physics educators experienced in the use of the Keller plan for personalized calculus-based physics instruction.

From study units already written by the educators, a set of materials to cover an entire course will be developed. The materials will include at least 45 study units including a study guide, three equivalent forms of a mastery test and a grading key for tutors.

The materials will enable any physics department to teach a Keller plan general physics course without extensive commitments of development time being made on the part of their staff members.

Royal society elects Yost

A history professor at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, John K. Yost, has been elected as Fellow in the prestigious Royal Historical Society of Great Britain.

Fellows in the Society are elected by its Council on the basis of the distinction they have achieved in historical studies.

Yost, a member of the UN-L faculty since 1967, is vice chairman of the history department and a member of the Executive Committee of the Arts and Sciences College. His research specialty is the history of religion and ethics, particularly in late medieval and early modern Europe. He has written numerous articles in this area of English and German history.

The Royal Historical Society is the principal organization representing English historical scholarship, both in the area of teaching and research. The Society is housed in University College, London, and Fellows have access to the resources of that institution.

Yost is a member of many professional organizations in the history field and is vice president of the University of Nebraska Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, national scholastic honor society in the arts and sciences.
