

Ford candidacy in U.S. news

President Ford announced that he will run for president in 1976 "in order to finish the job I have begun." Ford vowed to conduct "an open and aboveboard campaign." His campaign chairman, Howard Callaway, said Ford's campaign "would be separate from Vice President Nelson Rockefeller's."

An Eastern Airlines jet crashed while trying to land in heavy rain and lightning at New York City's Kennedy International Airport. The crash killed 110 of the 124 persons aboard.

Two FBI agents were shot to death while attempting to serve a warrant at the Pine Ridge Indian reservation in South Dakota. An Indian was killed in an exchange of gunfire with police.

Jimmy Hoffa, former head of the Teamsters union, was reported missing after his car was found parked outside a suburban Detroit restaurant.

Sam Giancana, reputed high-ranking Mafia leader who was linked to an alleged CIA plot to assassinate Cuban Premier Fidel Castro in the 1960s, was shot to death in his suburban Chicago home.

U.S. Atty. Gen. Edward Levi outlined to Congress the Ford administration's proposed gun-control law, which includes a ban on "Saturday-night specials." The administration proposals also call for a 500-man force of Treasury Dept. agents to attack the black market in handguns in the nation's 10 largest cities.

The Social Security system for the first time this year will pay out more in benefits than it receives in taxes, according to a report by trustees of the Social Security trust funds.

Some 60,000 labor-union members rallied in Washington, D.C. to protest rising unemployment, inflation and government "unresponsiveness." It was the largest protest of its kind since the "Bonus Army" veterans' march during the Great Depression.

Books few for ASUN

"If there is enough response, we'll continue it for another week," Say said. "But after that time, the number of students using the exchange really seems to drop off."

He said the supply of books at the exchange is lower than usual because "very few people" returned books last spring.

"We might have made a mistake by not running an ad or posters asking students to bring in books for the fall," Say said. He said ASUN will use posters during the first week of school to advertise what he called the need for books.

The exchange will initiate a numbering device this fall which Say said will simplify the process of selling books. The device will imprint into the front inside cover the number of the book, the seller's asking price and the class for which the book was used, he said. The seller then would fill out on a master list the number of the book and his name, he added. The process eliminates the need for the seller to complete a more extensive form and the chance that the price tab inside each book is lost.

The ASUN Book Exchange will be in the North and South Conference rooms of the Nebraska Union.

Law College exchange The Student Bar Association is sponsoring a book exchange and a book distribution service in the Law College on East Campus.

Law student Steve Machov said that at the book exchange, Student Bar members will sell books for other law students. The Student Bar will receive 10 per cent of the price received for each book, he said.

University Bookstore, Williams said, is providing a book distribution point for law books at the Law College. Law students will pay five per cent less for all the books, he said.

No law books are available at University Bookstore until the distribution at the Law College ends Aug. 27.

INFLATE-A-BED

THE NO WATER WATER BED EXCHANGE

But without the weight of water.

What's in this bed is the very same stuff you're breathing. This is the remarkable, new INFLATE-A-BED, the first real bed with no springs, no feathers, no foam, no water. Just plain, ordinary air.

Patented air coil coils: Unlike a common air mattress, the INFLATE-A-BED gives you support where you need it.

The secret is a series of unique air coil cells that evenly distribute air pressure throughout the bed. These coils are sealed into position. They perform the same functions as coil springs in conventional mattresses. But with no hard spots.

Inflates in just 3 minutes. The INFLATE-A-BED can be filled with air in just 3 minutes using an ordinary canister vacuum cleaner.

The degree of firmness is set by the amount of air pressure. With less air, the INFLATE-A-BED gives the sensuous response of a waterbed.

The bed of the future is here now. The INFLATE-A-BED is an exciting new product, the first really new idea in bedding in years. It's already been the subject of the new product sections of such diverse consumer publications as Playboy and Better Homes and Gardens. It's been featured nationally on the Mike Douglas Show.

And the best part is it's here right now. Finally, sleeping on air has become a reality.

INFLATE-A-BED makes a great permanent bed, or guest bed and is the ultimate in comfort for vans or campers. In the water it's ideal for skin diving or sun bathing.

Soft, velvet-tufted finish. The bed is tough, made of the same rugged material as used for inflatable boats (20 mil. vinyl). But the surface is soft and velvety. Made of electrostatically impregnated rayon, it's colorfast and fully washable. The same sheets can be used as on conventional bedding.

Total Portability. The bed can be taken anywhere, used anywhere, indoors and out. It's as at-home on a lake or ocean as in a bedroom. It deflates as quickly as it inflates, weighs less than 10 pounds. Folds to drawer size.
