

Hall meals still offered

Off-campus students who miss the "good old home-cooking" of the UNL residence halls may take out board-only contracts enabling them to eat two or three meals a day in a residence hall cafeteria.

Fawzi Hermes, associate director of housing, said these contracts offer students two meals per day for $655 per school year or three meals per day for $790 per school year.

Ten students presently are participating in the program, he said. The board-only contract is not widely publicized because the major concern of the Housing Office is the residence hall student.

Board-only contracts are available at the Office of Student Accounts in the Housing Office. Hermes said that students are not required to eat in any particular hall, but must follow the regular food service schedule.
