

Lame turkey's grace screen

By TV Aunt Hannah

This week's movies on air-wave TV are lame turkeys. Hobbled gobblers. Just no darned good. So Aunt Hannah recommends a play by Shakespeare, a follow-up documentary and a shopping expedition among the regular series.

Aunt Hannah admits many of TV's regular programs are also candidates for a Thanksgiving menu. But it is better to waste a mere half-hour on a bad show than two or more hours on a bad movie.

On the other hand, when discussing TV, it's probably best to not even bring up the subject of wasting time. Aunt Hannah recommends:

Macbeth (Thursday, Ch. 12, 8 p.m.) Eric Porter and Janet Suzman star in this British production, a filmed play. Just what is the matter with this Scot? He starts out as such a nice general, but ends up such a killer! Don't ask Macbeth—he says he sees floating daggers and ghosts at banquets. Tune in a half-hour early for a discussion of the play and performance.

Sanford and Son (Friday, Ch. 3, 7 p.m.) Redd Foxx is the archetypal ham. Foxx's comedy is not only a good reason to watch the show, it is almost the only reason. But students of the straight man can learn from Demond Wilson, playing the son. This week they are innocent bystanders at a bank robbery.

Mary Tyler Moore (Saturday, Ch. 6 and 10, 8 p.m.) This season the show has been delving into Mary's character, trying to discover just what it's like to suffer from terminal embarrassment. A priest wants to give up his profession for her this week. Betty White, as Sue Ann, is tasty as ever.

Monty Python's Flying Circus (Saturday, Ch. 12, 9:30 p.m.) One must never miss this show. It's as simple as that. What other program offers the Confuse-a-Cat service for owners of complacent pets?

Echoes of the Guns of Autumn (Sunday, Ch. 6 and 10, 5 p.m.) This CBS News documentary is sure to be declared a "media event." A few weeks ago CBS ran a documentary about hunting that many viewers claimed was biased against the sport. This program will tell the other side of the story. In order to partake in the feast of magazine articles sure to discuss "balanced coverage," watch this show.

Kojak (Sunday, Ch. 6 and 10, 8 p.m.) The plots of each episode are almost alike, but Telly Savalas's portrayal of the lollipop-sucking detective makes them worth seeing. Aunt Hannah is interested in this program because scratchy-voiced Neville Brand is a guest star. He won her heart as Reese in that old TV western, Laredo.

All In The Family (Monday, Ch. 6 and 10, 8 p.m.) Still the nation's favorite. Aunt Hannah would be interested in hearing a sociological explanation of this show's popularity—anybody know of one? This week Archie gives mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to a pretty woman entertainer. Well, she looked like a woman.

Eric Porter and Janet Suzman in Macbeth.

Space: 1999 (Tuesday, Ch. 6, 7 p.m.) Martin Landau and Barbara Bain play travelers in the outer void. This week the void dumps them on a brave new world where machines do all the work. What will the angular-faced pair do to pass the time?

Beason Hill (Tuesday, Ch. 6 and 10, 9 p.m.) Rob Lassiter must decide whether to terminate his business partnership with Harry Emmet. Oh, Harry's a fine fellow, essentially. If only his 18-year-old lover wasn't his niece.

Kate McShane (Wednesday, Ch. 6 and 10, 9 p.m.) Anne Meera plays a dedicated lawyer. This week she explains to the judge why her football-player client doesn't recall murdering his girl friend. Why, he was flying so high on amphetamines he can barely remember the score of last week's game! Give the kid a break, Judge.

Tonight Show (Wednesday, Ch. 3, 10:30 p.m.) What would TV be without Johnny Carson? This is the Nebraska native's 13th anniversary show, and lasts two hours. Clips from past programs will fill the commercial gaps.

A Guide For The Married Man (Cable TV Ch. 9: Sunday, 11 p.m.; Monday, 9 p.m.; Tuesday, 7 p.m.) Robert Morse instructs Walter Matthau in the art of adultery. But look at the list of guest stars: Lucille Ball, Jack Benny, Polly Bergen, Joey Bishop, Sid Caesar, Art Carney, Wally Cox, Jayne Mansfield, Hal March, Louis Nye, Carl Reiner, Phil Silvers and Terry Thomas.

Avocado salads

By Sharon Johnson

Avocados can be traced back to Mexico and Central and South America as early as 291 B.C. in Mayan records and Aztec picture writing. "Alligator pears," avocados, were mentioned in early tribal ceremonies of West Africa and early records of Spanish exploration in America.

Avocados now are available year round in the United States, but supply is greatest (therefore prices are generally lower) in March, April and May. More than 700 varieties of avocados are available, varying in weight, texture, shape and skin thickness.

Avocados are best for eating if they yield to light pressure on the outer rind. They may be purchased underripe and then ripened at room temperature. When fully ripe and ready to eat, the fruit will have a soft, oil-textured flesh and a very rich flavor.

A method for testing ripeness is to stick a toothpick in the stem end. If it slides in and out of the fruit freely, it is ripe and ready to eat. Avoid buying avocados with dark, soft, sunken spots on their surface or those that appear badly bruised.

The bland flavor and smooth texture of the avocado blend well with almost all other foods. It has a distinctive flavor and is frequently used as an appetizer or salad. Avocados can be used in a great variety of other dishes—mashed and spread on toast at breakfast, in a sandwich or as cubes added to soup for lunch.

Some people like thinly sliced avocados with a sprinkling of salt and pepper, with lemon or lime juice. Avocados can be served in the half-shell with dressings or the seed cavity filled with fruits, vegetables, cheese, meat or seafood.

Avocados contain a larger percentage of fat than any other fruit except olives. The high caloric content of avocados, about 250 calories in one half a medium winter avocado, is one reason avocados are frequently used as a garnish in small amounts on salads and soups. The avocado is the basic ingredient of a popular Mexican and American dish, guacamole.

2 ripe avocados, peeled and pitted
 1 medium onion, finely chopped
 2 green chili peppers, finely chopped
 1 tablespoon finely chopped lemon
 1 teaspoon salt
 ½ teaspoon coarsely ground pepper
 1 medium tomato, peeled and finely chopped
 —Mash avocados; add onion, peppers, lemon juice, salt and pepper. Beat until creamy. Gently fold in tomato. Cover and refrigerate until served.
