Bargaining hearing held

The NU College of Law and the NU College of Dentistry both were granted the power to present arguments that they should be excluded from the bargaining unit. Both groups had notified AAUP they did not wish to be in the proposed unit, but they must prove they should not be included if the court decides that the unit will be comprised of the whole university system.

Wright called Richard Noonan, director of system personnel, and Steven Sample, executive vice president for academic affairs, in an apparent effort to show that a community of interest exists between the three campuses.

Noonan said the major accounting practices of the university, payroll procedure and fringe benefits such as insurance plans and pension overlap among the three campuses, thus creating a community of interest.

Sample testified that the mission of the three campuses is clearly defined in the Toward Excellence program.

Wright said he will call two more witnesses Friday.

Others testifying at the hearing included: —Richard Gilbert, chemical engineering professor.

—Erwin Goldenstein, history and philosophy of education professor.

—James Kimberly, professor of sociology and department chairman.

—John Robinson, professor of English and department chairman.

—John Schultz, chemistry professor.

The hearing will reconvene at 9:30 Friday in room 109 of the Terminal Bldg., 10th and O streets.

This year's first meeting of the UNL Young Republicans is scheduled for Sept. 30 at 7 p.m. in the Nebraska Union. Guest speakers will be representatives of President Ford and former California Governor Ronald Reagan.

Correction

Two errors appeared in the list of administrators' salaries in the Wednesday Daily Nebraskan.

David McGill, assistant to the vice chancellor for the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources, is paid $28,881, not $14,388; and Quentin Gessner, dean of Continuing Studies, is paid $36,168, not $22,550.
