Mizzou game 'won't be same' as Colorado rout

By Pete Wegman

Nebraska fans can expect a different type of game next Saturday against Missouri than the Cornhuskers' 63-21 mauling of Colorado last Saturday, according to two UNL football coaches.

Warren Powers, defensive backfield coach, and Milt Tenopir, assistant offensive coach, spoke Monday to members of the Extra Point Club at the Elk's Club.

Tenopir, who scouted Missouri's 35-3 win over Kansas State Saturday, gave a report on Missouri and Powers substituted for Husker head coach Tom Osborne, who attended the funeral of former Husker Tom Pate in Omaha.

"I'll go to Missouri with the idea we'll be playing a different type of team than Colorado," Tenopir said. "The last couple of years Missouri has been kind of tough on us."

Last year the Tigers from Columbia used three fourth quarter touchdowns to beat Nebraska 21-10. Two years ago, Missouri beat Nebraska 13-12.

Tenopir said two Missouri starters this year, quarterback Steve Pisarkiewicz and tailback Tony Galbreath, had their varsity debuts against Nebraska last year.

Galbreath, with a sore ankle, sat out during last week's win and was replaced by Curtis Brown, who gained 141 yards in his first start.

"The way Brown ran, they really didn't miss Galbreath," Tenopir said. "There's a possibility they could use Galbreath at fullback and Brown at tailback against us."

He said Missouri has a good "scrambling-type defense."

"I do think we'll be able to throw against Missouri," he said, "but I may be out on a limb with that."

"You can throw all the past games out, because you know Missouri is going to be tough," he said.

"In the past two years we've played good at times against Missouri, but we couldn't seem to get the ball in the end zone."

Powers said he thinks the Huskers are doing better this year than in recent years capitalizing on opponent's miscues.

He said Nebraska's win over Colorado was one of the strangest games he has seen as a coach.

Powers said he thinks Nebraska's defensive pursuit is the best in the nation.

"The pursuit causes breakdowns, causes fumbles. Our defensive theory is to try to control the tempo of the game," he said.

"It was the best game our offensive line has had," he said. "Vince Ferragamo had a tremendous day."

Moving kickoff time back an hour and a half is only one of the complications with a nationally televised college football game, according to Donn Bernstein, National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) press director for ABC television.

The Nebraska-Missouri football game Saturday will be telecast nationwide on ABC. Kickoff is at noon CST. The change from the scheduled 1:30 p.m. kickoff was to accommodate ABC plans for a college football doubleheader, Bernstein said.

The Nebraska-Missouri telecast was announced during halftime of the USC-Notre Dame game last Saturday. The decision to broadcast was made "sometime during the first half of the Nebraska-Colorado game," Bernstein said.

Open date

The broadcast was "pencilled in" to fill the open Saturday, but the announcement was delayed until the outcome of the Colorado-Nebraska game was apparent.

"We schedule them at the last minute, because we don't want to schedule a team who gets badly beaten," he said. "We keep the options open."

"We want to broadcast the best possible games with the widest interest," he said.

All scheduling plans must be approved by the NCAA television committee and follow NCAA guidelines, Bernstein said.

ABC vice president for programming, is in touch with Tom Hanson, chairman of the television committee who ratifies those decisions in behalf of the committee," Bernstein said.

Spence and Boone Arledge, president of ABC sports, make the final decision of which games to broadcast, Bernstein said.

National payment

ABC pays $487,857 for national and $355,000 for regional telecasts, Dave Cawood, public relations director for the NCAA, said.

The NCAA takes a five and one-half per cent assessment and the remainder is split between the participating schools, Cawood said.

In the Big 8, the total goes to the conference and is divided evenly among the eight members.

Every two years, new guidelines for television broadcasts are set by the NCAA. Current guidelines expire this year, according to Bernstein.

Three telecasts

By NCAA rules, teams are limited to three "charged" telecasts in two years, he said. "Charged" games are those scheduled on regular season Saturdays. Special exemption dates, which are not charged, include Dec. 7, Sept. 7, Thanksgiving, Labor Day, Veterans' Day, weekdays and ABC's one "wildcard" Saturday, Bernstein said.

"We only have one wildcard," he said.

"The other open Saturdays are often misnamed 'wildcard,' but they are charged against the teams, wildcards aren't."

Missouri has appeared twice on television this season, he said, but the Missouri-Alabama game on a Monday was not charged. The Missouri-Illinois game also was telecast.

Following the Nebraska-Missouri game, regional games will begin at 3 p.m. CST. The University of Southern California (USC)-University of California game will be the "lead regional" game broadcast in 80 per cent of the nation, Bernstein said. Louisiana State University vs. Mississippi University and South Carolina vs. North Carolina State will be broadcast in smaller "areas of interest."

Coach satisfied by crew efforts

Nebraska crew coach Ron Rusthoven said he was "extremely satisfied" with the efforts of UNL's crew Saturday at the Head-of-the-Charles Regatta in Boston.

Nebraska's women's four-person shell finished 8th of 40 entries with a time of 22:23.4, less than two minutes behind Yale's first place shell in the three-mile race.

UNL's men's heavyweight four placed ninth of 40 shells in the intermediate college division and 22nd in the elite or Olympic division, with a time of 19:14. Yale was first with 18:20.7.

Nebraska has filed an official protest against Boston University for interference in the race. Rusthoven said the official results won't be released until later this week.

The protest was filed after the Boston University shell refused to let the UNL team pass, Rusthoven said. The rules of the meet stated that slower crews had to allow faster crews to pass.

The men's lightweight four was in the toughest race, according to Rusthoven, and finished 22nd with 18:56.2, less than a minute behind the first place U.S. National team.

Assistant coach Mark Stormberg was seventh of 30 single scull entries in the Olympic division.

"I think we're really quite satisfied. The competition there keeps getting tougher and tougher," he said. "I thought we closed out the fall in pretty good shape."

An estimated 50,000 spectators watched 2,870 competitors, 685 boats, and 134 clubs and schools participate in 18 events in the 11th annual regatta, the world's largest, according to Rusthoven.

First place overall in the regatta went to Harvard, which won the Paul Revere trophy. Pennsylvania was second and MIT was third.

Cager prospects netted out of state

By Jim Hunt

Last season UNL head basketball coach Joe Cipriano and his staff went out of state to find prospects for the Husker basketball team. Consequently, no Nebraska freshmen will be on scholarship for the first time since 1972.

Cipriano landed three players from Indiana-Val Martin, Brian Banks and Carl McPipe.

The other two recruits are Fernando Chevannes from Panama City, Panama and Allen Holder, a junior college transfer from Seminole Junior College in Seminole, Okla.

"We feel that this was a good recruiting year," Cipriano said. "We got what we feel are some very good basketball players."

Highly sought

Martin, a 6 ft., 6 in. forward, was one of the most sought players in Indiana last year. At John Adams High School in South Bend, he was named first team all-state by the Associated Press and United Press International. Martin averaged 20 points and nine rebounds a game and belonged to an Indiana all-star team that toured Russia and Europe last summer.

"I like Lincoln because it is similar to South Bend," Martin said. "It's a campus town and the people are friendly. I think it is a good place to get an education."

"The basketball program at UNL has a lot of potential," he said. "The new field house shows that there is a lot of interest in basketball in Nebraska. There are a lot of good players on the team and I will be pleased with myself if I make the varsity."

Banks, a 6 ft. guard from Hammond, Ind., averaged 20 points a game and hit 63.8 per cent his senior year. Banks received all-state and all-sectional honors at Hammond High School and played in Indiana's East-West prep All-Star Game.

Likes Lincoln

Banks, like Martin, said he likes Lincolnites, UNL and the Husker basketball program. Louisville and Arizona Universities tried to recruit him.

Banks is joined at UNL by McPipe, a 6 ft., 8 in. center, who played across town at Hammond Technical. McPipe averaged 22 points and 15 rebounds a game his senior year. He was named to all-sectional and honorable mention all-state teams.

"I thought I could come down here and play on a championship team," said McPipe, who was recruited by Indiana, Notre Dame, and Virginia, among others. "I came to UNL because I thought I could fit into the system here better."

Chevannes, a 6 ft., 5 in. forward, said he came to UNL because he wanted to play major college basketball and get a good education.

All-Panama

At Y Officios High School in Panama City, Chevannes averaged 29 points and 10 rebounds per game. In high school he was named all-Panama City, all-Panama and All-Star of the Central American and Caribbean countries.

Chevannes was named the most valuable player after scoring 34 points in a game against a Russian team.

"There is a big difference between basketball in Panama and the United States," Chevannes said. "It is a lot more physical up here. In international competition we had to learn to play physical basketball."

While at Seminole Junior College, Holder, a 6 ft., 3 in. guard-forward, averaged 15 points a game and was the team's leading rebounder, averaging 10.3 rebounds a game.

"The Big 8 has a lot of tough guards," Holder said. "It has a lot of tough competition, I am really looking forward to playing basketball in the Big 8."

Player of year

Holder gained all-state honors in high school at Rancho High School in Las Vegas. He was named Nevada's 1973 Co-High School Player of the Year.

Holder listed the new field house, a good business college and respect for the UNL coaching staff among his reasons for coming to UNL.
