Our Speaker Comparator

The only fair way you can compare speakers is if certain criteria are met, namely that the speakers be compared at exactly the same volumes and that the switching be done instantaneously.

The differences between speakers could be heard by everyone if it weren't for great variations in speaker efficiency. This simply means that given the same amount of power, different speakers will play at different volume levels.

When you try to compare two speakers, one will play louder, and the louder speaker will usually sound like the better loud speaker, whether or not it really is. All the other more important performance differences, such as range, distortion and tonal balance will be obscured.

To enable you to make such comparisons we have installed a new speaker comparator in our audio room. This in no way alters the sound quality of the speakers connected to it. It enables you to compare speakers of varying efficiencies at the same volume level. Our comparisons are instantaneous because even a one or two second delay in switching would be sufficient to cause you to forget what the first pair sounded like before you heard the second pair. Only with this kind of comparison can you hear and evaluate all the performance characteristics of the speakers you are considering. On the basis of this concrete information you can then make a rational choice.

We think this type of demonstration device will give you the tools you need to be a participant rather than an observer in the selection process of your speakers.
